FEDERALS ADVANCE ON TORREON

CONCENTRATE FOUR REGIMENTS AROUND REBEL STRONGHOLD

Rebel Offensive Reported Stopped At Culiacan

MEXICO CITY, March 15.—Four regiments of federal artillery were concentrating on the rebel city of Torreon today to support the government's offensive from three directions.

The Presidencia announced that artillery regiments were moving near the insurgent city simultaneously with the advance of infantry and cavalry, some parts of which have been ordered to cut off the anticipated retreat of rebels to the northern Chihuahua strongholds.

Plutarco Elias Calles, commanding the federal army column advancing on Durango, ordered the forces moving on Torreon to prevent the escape of "a single one" of the insurgents in that area.

Meanwhile, the military operations in other sections appeared to have changed but slightly.

Fifty men at Queretaro state of Sonora, deserted the forces of the rebel Gen. Francisco Manzo between Hermosillo and Nogales, the government announced. They burned bridges to cut off the reported retreat of Manzo's men, it was announced.

The rebel forces of Gen. Roberto Cruz, which had been advancing down the west coast, were reported retreating again toward the northern border of the state of Sinaloa.

The rebel troops apparently had not advanced closer to their western objective, Mazatlan, than the city of Culiacan.

The official communique announcing that forces under Gen. Juan Almazan, Gen. Saturnino Cedillo and Gen. Cardenas were converging on Torreon, gave an outline of the federal activities in that area, where the principal battle in the state of Coahuila is expected to take place.

The chief federal columns will attack with Viesca, state of Coahuila, as their central base. Gen. Almazan's forces will move along the Hipolito Railway, and Gen. Cedillo's forces will advance via the Parras Railway branch and Gen. Cardenas will attack from the Durango area, which Calles anticipates will be captured today.

The government communique yesterday announced that federal forces under General Cedillo had killed thirty rebels and taken eighty prisoners in a battle at Encantada, state of Coahuila.

The president announced that Senora Escobar, wife of the rebel leader, had arrived at Juarez, on the Rio Grande, in a special car with a large sum of money.

An unconfirmed report here that Manzo was negotiating with the government for surrender caused a sensation. If the report should prove to be true, it was believed Manzo's surrender would mean the complete collapse of the rebellion.

DELAWARE HIGH IS DAMAGED BY BLAZE

DELAWARE, O., March 15.—Fire which partially destroyed the Delaware High School during the night, resulting in the injury of two firemen, caused damage estimated at $75,000, it was announced today.

The blaze broke out in a section separated from the front part of the structure by a fire wall. This is the only thing that saved the building from complete destruction, it is believed.

Fire Chief Cliff Dall and Fireman Arthur Reese were badly burned when a portion of the room and floor on the upper story gave away. They clung to a window ledge until rescued.

Cause of the blaze has not been determined. The junior class play was to have been given last night and special scenery was burned.

The section hit housed the chemical laboratory, the superintendent's office, the assembly room and the library.

THURSDAY IS FINAL TAX RETURN DAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 15.—This is the last day for filing your income tax return.

Unless the return is in the mail by midnight tonight, an extra penalty of 25 per cent will be imposed. Heavy fines are provided also for those who "willfully" fail to make their tax return on time.

Married persons with a joint net income of $3,500 and single persons with a net income of $1,500 are required to make returns.

TARIFF INCREASE ARRAYS COUNTRIES AGAINST AMERICA

Protests Cause for Grave Concern Of Diplomats

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The intensity and volume of protests from foreign nations about the contemplated increase of American tariff rates has created an international situation in which nearly the whole world seems to be arrayed against the United States. The delicate problem confronting President Hoover is causing concern among American diplomats here and abroad.

Great Britain, Italy, France, Cuba and Canada have now joined the vehement South American protests, as the house ways and means committee finishes the first draft of the new tariff bill to be considered at the special session of congress beginning April 15.

An official note is on its way from France, according to published resumes of the document, suggesting that the United States has failed to return the tariff favors granted this country by France. The French also are interested in proposed increases of American duties on silk fabrics which are imported here in large quantities.

The Cuban ambassador has sent a special note through the state department to the house ways and means committee, proposing a new special reciprocal tariff arrangement with Cuba to avoid diplomatic dissensions over the proposed increase in sugar rates.

The Italian chamber of commerce has forwarded protests against the proposed American valuation system upon which tariff rates would be based.

A political movement has been started in Canada looking toward protection of the dominion's interests if tariff rates are boosted on Canadian products, as contemplated. Canada already suffers from a heavily adverse balance of trade with the United States.

Such protests are extremely unusual, but they would not be so seriously regarded if it was not for the South American situation. A long series of protests have been voiced by Argentine and other South American countries against increases under the flexible provisions of the tariff act.

The South American situation is in some quarters believed to have caused Mr. Hoover to make his recent good will tour through that continent.

Diplomats here say they see nothing feasible to do about the situation. The administration is pledged to an increase of duties on agricultural products. The platform for such increases was written into the Republican platform and championed during the campaign, and is regarded by Republican leaders as an absolutely essential step to protect American farmers.

These international observers foresee the possibility of a worldwide storm if the tariff increase program is carried out as now seems essential, and they are at a loss to explain how the situation can be handled satisfactorily.

Former Orrville Banker Accused Of Embezzling More Than $100,000; Faces Five Federal Indictments.

CLEVELAND, March 15.—Frank L. Strauss, 53, former vice president and cashier of the Orrville National Bank at Orrville, O., was held to federal court here today under five indictments charging embezzlement and false entry.

It is charged that he converted more than $100,000 of depositors' funds to his own use over a period of fourteen years.

Strauss was surrendered to assistant U. S. Attorney Donald C. Van Buren by his attorney, Edward Wirtz. He resigned from the bank in November, 1927, after shortages were uncovered in bank accounts and came to Cleveland where he obtained employment with a brokerage firm.

His father had been the founder of the Orrville Bank, and Strauss virtually inherited the positions of vice-president and cashier, Van Buren said.

When the shortages in his account were uncovered, four members of his family made them up, bank officers said. Action of the members of the family in making up the shortage has prevented either depositors or the bank from suffering any loss, Van Buren said.

SENATE PASSES STATE OFFICE BILL; FAVORS PENSION BILL

New State House Measure Will Be Signed By Governor; Police And Firemen Benefit From Pension Bill

COLUMBUS, O., March 15.—If the house concurs in the senate amendments to the Rohe-Morgan bill, Ohio may have a new state office building.

The measure passed the senate late yesterday with amendments and it is a foregone conclusion that Governor Cooper will sign it.

Members from Cleveland, at the last minute, attempted to stage a filibuster but were unsuccessful and the bill passed 21 to 3.

An attempt may be made Monday to have it reconsidered.

The Clevelanders attempted to amend the bill by inserting a provision which would permit the building on the state house grounds. The measure says "conveniently near" to the capitol.

They argued such a provision would be a useful threat against any real estate dealers who attempted to charge too much for land nearby. Floor Leader Allen O. Aigler said the house had definitely defeated such a proposed amendment when it passed the bill some weeks ago and he argued that the amendment might result in trouble between the two houses and endanger the bill.

Senator Paul M. Herbert of Columbus argued that the state would never be able to dispose of the building if it were to be erected on the state house grounds.

The bill as passed provides a levy of two tenths of a mill for two years; a commission appointed by the governor with him retaining veto power; a site convenient to the state house but off the grounds proper; and sale of the present Wyandott building and lease of the old Hartman hotel building.

The senate also passed the Bendy bills providing for mandatory police and firemen pension funds to be administered by a board consisting of two elected by departments, two from city councils, and two chosen by these four with power to choose another to break ties.

Under the Gillen bill passed by the senate, the board of control will have supervisory power over the state department of education in allotting aid to weak school districts.

Senator W. W. Farnsworth of Toledo introduced a resolution asking $3,000 for dedication of a monument to Gen. Anthony Wayne at Maumee.

The senate also passed a resolution by Senator George H. Bender of Cleveland, providing for a committee to consider the advisability of the state taking over the title to the Thomas A. Edison homestead in Milan.

The house, in session this morning, had before it for consideration the "Ripper" bill by Rep. E. G. Schuessler, of Cincinnati, to take out from under civil service regulations the subordinate employees of the Cincinnati municipal court.

Two other bills of state-wide importance were on the calendar. One, by Rep. Fred Myers, Toledo, would authorize villages and townships to enter into contracts with neighboring cities for fire protection.

The other, by Rep. C. Emery, Pike County, apparently is aimed at "chain" grocery and drug stores.

URGES SUPPORT FOR MEASURE AT PUBLIC HEARING THURSDAY

Minister Admits He Represents Klan And Junior Orde

COLUMBUS, O., March 15.—The "Bible Bill" introduced in the legislature by Rep. Lloyd Weaver of Akron, is being openly backed by the Ku Klux Klan.

This was disclosed for the first time last night when the schools committee of the house held its first public hearing on the measure.

One speaker for the bill, Rev. J. H. E. Moxley, of Canal Fulton, admitted to the committee that he represented the Klan. Further evidence was submitted by Rep. B. L. Creevy, of Ashtabula County, who read a letter sent him by Ashtabula Klan No. 157 urging him to support the measure.

Creevy, in presenting the letter, made it clear to the committee that he is not a Klansman and that he is personally opposed to the bill. The Rev. M. Moxley, during his speech, said he was before the committee as the "representative of three organizations." When he finished, Rep. Thomas Jones, Meigs County asked what these organizations were.

"I represent the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, the Daughters of America, and the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," replied Moxley.

Arguments made before the committee by advocates of the measure centered chiefly around the contention that the youth of the state is not receiving adequate instruction in the Bible, and that to remedy this situation readings of ten verses daily in the schools without comment should be made compulsory. Opponents of the measure branded the bill as a violation of American principles guaranteeing religious freedom. A move to unite church and state in violation of the constitution, and an attempt to force protestant religion upon the entire state.

Rabbi Solomon Rivlin, of Columbus, opposing the bill, appealed to the committee to oppose any such attempt to interfere with religious freedom.

The Rev. C. V. Leach, Mt. Vernon, Seventh Day Adventist, attacked the bill because it attempts "to force the Bible upon the youth" and because the measure would, he said, cause state-wide dissension.

"The division of sentiment and conviction here tonight on this bill is indicative of the situation throughout the state," he declared. "It is found in every community. The way to stir up religious dissension and strife is to pass this measure."

He pointed out that the bill does not specify what version of the Bible the verses read shall be taken from, whether from the King James, Douay or Jewish version.

"Who shall decide whether it is to be the Protestant, Catholic or Jewish book?" he asked. "You know, though, that there wouldn't be much support here tonight if it were thought that the Catholic version were going to be used."

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Mar. 15.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was expected to bring his three weeks vacation to a close today and start for the airport, resuming an interrupted inspection tour he interrupted to visit his fiancée, Miss Anne Morrow, in Mexico City.

According to Junior's testimony the Arnolds enticed Melvin into their house, the younger Arnold driving him away in his car later.

ELIAS ARNOLD ADMITS CLAIM MADE BY STATE

But Alleged Kidnap Attempts To Explain Away Evidence

WOOSTER, March 15.—Admissions that he told his son Arthur Arnold "not to take the blame in this case" and instructed his wife to burn headgear which might be used as evidence opened testimony of Elias Arnold in common pleas court here today.

Arnold on trial for child stealing, said he was afraid a cap might be "planted" in his home by detectives. Hence he told her to burn any caps she could find on the premises, he explained.

He said that Arthur, his co-defendant, was so fond of him that he was afraid the boy would confess a crime he didn't commit to free his father.

Elias admitted that he bore a grudge against Marshal Roy Horst, Melvin's uncle, and that he may have said he would "get even." The marshal frequently had arrested the senior Arnold and others of his family.

ENTIRE POPULATION OF ALABAMA VILLAGE MAROONED BY WATER

Helpless Inhabitants Cling To Roofs Or Trees While Rescue Work Starts; Guardsmen Guard Motor Boat Parties

TROY, Ala., March 15.—Marooned and facing possible death from rapidly rising waters of the Pea River and White Water Creek, 4,000 persons, the entire population of Elba, thirty-two miles south of here, awaited rescuers today.

Many of the residents of the flood swept town clung to house tops, upper branches of tall trees or floated about on chunks of wreckage, while waiting for aid which was being hastened to the rescue by boat and airplane.

Five planes of the 106th Observation Squadron, air unit of the Alabama National Guard, left Roberts Field at Birmingham today to fly over Elba and return to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, to report to Governor Bibb Graves the condition at Elba and in the adjacent flooded territory.

Motorboats from Montgomery reached here early today and plans were made to send them southward eighteen miles to where the highway to Elba goes under water. National

FLOOD REFUGEE TELLS STORY

TROY, Ala., March 15.—The first refugee from stricken Elba, Ala., arrived here early today with a graphic tale of conditions in that town.

He was Thomas L. Rice, who escaped the floods by traveling for miles in a boat.

"I was fully six miles away from the worst flooded section of town," he said, "and I could hear them yelling for help."

His story caused extraordinary efforts to be made here to get assistance to those in danger.

At dawn eight motor cars with boats strapped on the sides, left in the direction of Elba. Rice also brought the first authentic news of deaths caused by the floods.

"I passed three bodies floating in the water," he told Red Cross workers.

guardsmen waited there to man the attempt of the boats to reach the isolated village.

More than 800 men, including National Guardsmen strove to row across the swift torrents that cut Elba off from the world on three sides, only to have their boats capsize or forced back.

News that the town had been hit by a quick rise in the Pea River was broadcast last night by Governor Graves and rescue parties immediately set out.

First attempts to reach the stricken Elbans resulted in disaster this morning when a boat carrying four National Guardsmen capsized in the torrent and the crew was swept from sight. It was feared that they were drowned. Another boat was forced to return to shore.

Tales of heroism came out of the town almost simultaneously with news that it was stricken. A brave telephone operator remained at her switchboard and sent out pleas for aid until water short-circuited the switchboard. Cut off from telephone communications since Thursday night, the town was unable to tell the outside world of its plight, but stragglers from the flooded area said Elba's residents were undergoing experiences of doomed persons who cannot escape their fate.

A survivor who rowed for miles past house-tops and tree-tops told of hearing cries for help while six miles away from Elba. Another who escaped from the town itself reached Dothan, his ears ringing with the memory of the shouted pleas of 350 children, marooned in a school building.

Most of the residents in Elba are congregated in the larger buildings. The smaller houses have been carried away by the waters. At least 1200 persons were reported on the upper floors of the federal building, the lower floor of which was covered with three feet of water.

Grave fear was felt for those who were forced to attics and roofs of the lighter structures.

Conditions in other portions of southern Alabama, though not as acute as at Elba, have been reported rapidly growing more serious. At Brewton, the waters of Burn Corn River and Murder Creek are reported out of their banks and an extremely serious situation is being anticipated.

At Geneva, on the Choctawhatchee River, a like situation exists according to reports. Many in the city were reported leaving because of the threatening appearance of the river.

The Conecuh River, north of here, was out of its banks and threatening to destroy the sole means of traffic communication into Troy. A patrol of guardsmen was placed on the bridge across the river. The structure was weakened by the high waters.

M. S. Dodson, publisher of the Troy Messenger, said a relief party in two days had penetrated to a point six miles north of Elba, and found thirty-five persons huddled on rooftops at a hamlet called Big Creek.

Three women and two children—the only boats could hold—were taken off. Flood waters were a mile wide at that point.

What Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Mr. Hoover might decide upon naval matters probably would depend largely upon developments at the preliminary disarmament conference which is to meet again in Geneva April 15.

In any event, the naval powers are to meet in 1931 at the resumed Washington arms conference discussions. Bridgeman's statement in the commons yesterday that Britain was ready to consider any new proposals for naval limitations was welcomed by official Washington.

There was no disposition to dispute Bridgeman's assertion conditions of acceptance would rest only upon "claiming for ourselves the right to protect our insular position and imperil responsibilities."

BRITON WHO HALTED NAVY LIMITATIONS MEETING RETIRED

Bridgeman's Plan To Leave Admiralty Causes Interest

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Official Washington learned with interest today that the man who generally is blamed in this country for smashing former President Coolidge's 1927 naval limitations conference at Geneva had announced his intention to retire from the British house of commons.

The man is W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty—corresponding to America's secretary of the navy. It was Bridgeman and Hugh S. Gibson, then American minister to Switzerland, who angrily opposed each other at Geneva before the Coolidge conferences adjourned in failure.

The snap judgment of official Washington today was Bridgeman's decision not to stand again for parliament had somewhat improved the chances of eventual naval limitations agreement between London and Washington.

This opinion was predicted upon the belief Bridgeman was the spear point of the British "big navy" drive.

LINDY'S VACATION ENDS

Will Resume Airport Inspection Stopped To Visit Fiancee

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Mar. 15.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was expected to bring his three weeks vacation to a close today and start for his post at the airport.

Spectators at International Field had a few minutes of suspense late yesterday when Lindbergh made a forced landing with two passengers, Dr. Lawrence H. Mayers of Chicago and Robert Guerrant, a pilot.

The plane passed out of sight behind some woods as it descended and spectators, recalling Lindbergh's crash in Mexico City, ran to the spot.

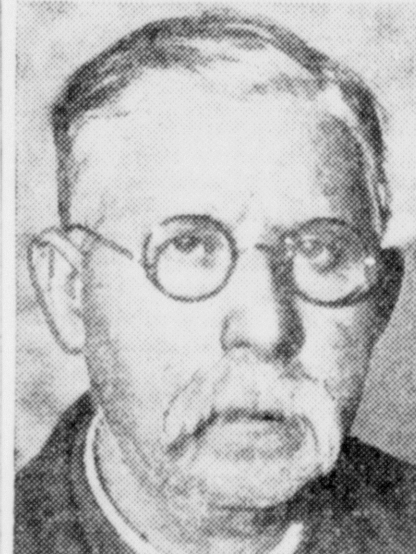

The trans Atlantic flyer reached here yesterday afternoon from Mexico City in a mail plane. Alternating at the controls with the regular pilot, R. V. Kent, Lindbergh made the trip in five hours with a short stop at Tampico.

ACCUSES UNCLE

Elias Arnold, top of Orrville, O., accused jointly with his son Arthur of child stealing in connection with the disappearance of Melvin Horst, four-year-old Orrville youth, snatched at Wooster, O., as Junior Hanna, 8, below, his nephew, related his story of the kidnapping of the child. According to Junior's testimony the Arnolds enticed Melvin into their house, the younger Arnold driving him away in his car later.

ELIAS ARNOLD ADMITS CLAIM MADE BY STATE

But Alleged Kidnapers Attempts To Explain Away Evidence

WOOSTER, March 15.—Admissions that he told his son Arthur Arnold "not to take the blame in this case" and instructed his wife to burn headgear which might be used as evidence opened testimony of Elias Arnold in common pleas court here today.

Arnold on trial for child stealing, said he was afraid a cap might be "planted" in his home by detectives. Hence he told her to burn any caps she could find on the premises, he explained.

He said that Arthur, his co-defendant, was so fond of him that he was afraid the boy would confess a crime he didn't commit to free his father.

Elias admitted that he bore a grudge against Marshal Roy Horst, Melvin's uncle, and that he may have said he would "get even." The marshal frequently had arrested the senior Arnold and others of his family.

BOYD APPOINTED

COLUMBUS, O., March 15.—Clinton D. Boyd, Middletown attorney, has been appointed judge of the Butler County Common Pleas Court by Governor Myers. J. Cooper. He succeeds Judge Clarence Murphy who recently resigned.

PLANES FOR MEXICO

TROY, O., March 15.—The Mexican government has purchased four planes from an airplane manufacturing company here and the ships are now enroute to Mexico for use in pursuit and observation.

OF ALABAMA VILLAGE MAROONED BY WATER

Helpless Inhabitants Cling To Roofs Or Trees While Rescue Work Starts; Guardsmen Guard
Motor Boat Parties

TROY, Ala., March 15.—Marooned and facing possible death from rapidly rising waters of the Pea River and White Water Creek, 4,000 persons, the entire population of Elba, thirty-two miles south of here, awaited rescuers today.

Many of the residents of the flood swept town clung to house tops, upper branches of tall trees or floated about on chunks of wreckage, while waiting for aid which was being hastened to the rescue by boat and airplane.

Five planes of the 106th Observation Squadron, air unit of the Alabama National Guard, left Roberts Field at Birmingham today to fly over Elba and return to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, to report to Governor Bibb Graves the condition at Elba and in the adjacent flooded territory.

Motorboats from Montgomery reached here early today and plans were made to send them southward eighteen miles to where the highway to Elba goes under water. National

FLOOD REFUGEE TELLS STORY

TROY, Ala., March 15.—The first refugee from stricken Elba, Ala., arrived here early today with a graphic tale of conditions in that town.

He was Thomas L. Rice, who escaped the floods by traveling for miles in a boat.

"I was fully six miles away from the worst flooded section of town," he said, "and I could hear them yelling for help."

His story caused extraordinary efforts to be made here to get assistance to those in danger.

At dawn eight motor cars with boats strapped on the sides, left in the direction of Elba.

Rice also brought the first authentic news of deaths caused by the floods.

"I passed three bodies floating in the water," he told Red Cross workers.

guardsmen waited there to man the attempt of the boats to reach the isolated village.

More than 800 men, including National Guardsmen strove to row across the swift torrents that cut Elba off from the world on three sides, only to have their boats capsize or forced back.

News that the town had been hit by a quick rise in the Pea River was broadcast last night by Governor Graves and rescue parties immediately set out.

First attempts to reach the stricken Elbans resulted in disaster this morning when a boat carrying four National Guardsmen capsized in the torrent and the crew was swept from sight. It was feared that they were drowned. Another boat was forced to return to shore.

Tales of heroism came out of night, were stranded miles from the town almost simultaneously with news that it was stricken. A brave telephone operator remained at her switchboard and sent out pleas for aid until water short-circuited the switchboard. Cut off from telephone communications since Thursday night, the town was unable to tell the outside world of its plight, but stragglers from the flooded area said Elba's residents were undergoing experiences of doomed persons who cannot escape their fate.

A survivor who rowed for miles past house-tops and tree-tops told of hearing cries for help while six miles away from Elba. Another was rescued from the town itself reached Dothan, his ears ringing with the memory of the shouted pleas of 350 children, marooned in a school building.

Most of the residents in Elba are congregated in the larger buildings. The smaller houses have been carried away by the waters. At least 1200 persons were reported building, the lower floor of which was covered with three feet of water.

Grave fear was felt for those who ascended to attics and roofs of the lighter structures.

Conditions in other portions of southern Alabama, though not as acute as at Elba, have been reported rapidly growing more serious. At Brewton, the waters of Burn Creek and Murder Creek are reported out of their banks and an extremely serious situation is being anticipated.

At Geneva, on the Choctawhatchee River, a like situation exists according to reports. Many in the city were reported leaving because of the threatening appearance of the river.

The Conecuh River, north of here, was out of its banks and threatening to destroy the sole means of traffic communication into Troy. A patrol of guardsmen was placed on the bridge across the river. The structure was weakened by the high waters.

M. S. Dodson, publisher of the Troy Messenger, said a relief party in two days had penetrated to a point six miles north of Elba, and found thirty-five persons huddled on roof-tops at a hamlet called Big Creek.

Three women and two children—all the boats could hold—were taken off. Flood waters were a mile wide at that point.

DOTHAN, Ala., March 15.—With all telephone communications down, the 4,000 inhabitants of Elba, Ala., were out of touch with the outside world today, and in great danger of being wiped out before help could reach them.

Rescue parties from all nearby towns, brought to realization of the immediate danger by a radio broadcast by Gov. Bibb Graves last night, were ready to consider any new proposals for naval limitations was welcomed by official Washington.

There was no disposition to dispute Bridgeman's assertion conditions of acceptance would rest only upon "claiming for ourselves the right to protect our insular position and imperil responsibilities."

MRS. WILBUR'S COURAGE SURMOUNTING INJURY PROVES TO BE TALK OF CAPITAL

Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and
The Gazette

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Few women in Washington, or anywhere, exceed the frail wife of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, new secretary of the interior, in courage.

Seven years ago she went for a ride on her favorite mount along the California bridge paths. An expert horsewoman, with years of riding experience, she trotted and cantered along swiftly, the horse under perfect control. Then, just as she wheeled her horse to make a sharp right angle turn, the saddle, which had been improperly tightened, slipped, and Mrs. Wilbur was hurled to the ground. Investigation disclosed no serious injuries, and after a brief rest, she resumed her rides. Dr. Wilbur, at that time president of Stanford University, California, worried greatly every time his wife was on the bridge path after her accident, and she finally gave up the recreation to please him.

Although the shock of her injuries never seemed to disappear entirely, Mrs. Wilbur continued to do the many things required of the wife of the president of a large university. Then, last fall, X-rays showed that her neck had been broken for seven years, ever since the fall from her horse. Seven years she had gone about her duties, entertaining extensively, running her house, handicapped by an injury so serious that it usually means almost instant death.

Now, months later, after days of intense suffering on the brink of death, Mrs. Wilbur has come to Washington to be with her husband, and, in a soft voice, apologizes for her indisposition and regrets that for a long time she will not be able to do her part socially as the wife of a cabinet official.

Teas Largely Attended
Entertainment on a large scale such as cabinet wives must do is familiar to Mrs. Wilbur. At Stanford she served as many as 1,500 persons at one time, and frequently 250 guests came to her teas. Dr. Wilbur is a physician, and when he was studying abroad, his wife maintained homes for him in London and Munich. For several years before he became president of Stanford he was head of its college of medicine. Mrs. Wilbur comes of a family of physicians and two of her sons are doctors.

The Wilburs have five children, three boys and two girls. Mrs. Wilbur is fond of travel. "We Californians are inveterate travelers," she declares. "We see a great deal of the country because we have to go so far to get any place."

If courage alone can restore a person to health quickly, it won't be long until Mrs. Wilbur will join the other cabinet ladies in holding "at homes" each week, since courage is the special forte of the attractive gray-haired wife of the new secretary of the interior.

RED CROSS AND SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE WILL MERGE OFFICES

Although an executive secretary has not been selected, the Greene County Chapter Red Cross and the Social Service League will merge their activities on or before April 1, according to a decision reached at a joint meeting held Thursday afternoon.

Temporarily the consolidated welfare organization will have its headquarters in the Red Cross rooms in the Court House and the Social Service League headquarters at City Hall will be abandoned. The quarters now occupied by the league will be taken over by the city for municipal purposes and, according to City Auditor T. H. Zell, will be fitted up for use by the city engineer.

The Rev. Harvey Crowell, Osborn, president of the Red Cross chapter, presided at the joint meeting Thursday.

GRAND JURY RETURNS ELEVEN TRUE BILLS IN PARTIAL REPORT

Eleven indictments were returned by the grand jury for the January term in special session in Common Pleas Court Wednesday, according to a partial report made to Judge R. L. Gowdy.

During the one-day session, the jury investigated twelve cases, found eleven true bills, ignored one case and examined more than twenty-five witnesses.

The jury recessed until next

Wednesday when it will re-convene and consider the remainder of a number of minor cases on the criminal docket awaiting disposition.

None of the indictments were for a more serious offense than burglary and larceny.

C. B. Hazard acted as foreman of the grand jury.

Oscar Montgomery was indicted twice for burglary and larceny in connection with the looting of the country homes of O. A. Dobbins and Thomas Buck last November 25. Goods stolen from the Dobbins residence were valued at $307.50 and from the Buck home, $197.20.

Jack McCabe, Thomas Moore and John Doan were each indicted for theft of a Chevrolet coach valued at $300, belonging to the Bales Motor Sales, last January 6.

An indictment for burglary was returned against Robert Johnston, who is alleged to have broken into a box car on the Pennsylvania Railroad last January 18.

Robert and Martin Nooks, both colored, were jointly indicted for theft. They are accused of the theft of a hog valued at $25 from Fred Williamson February 4.

An indictment was also returned charging Nathan Mahaffey with stealing a quantity of meat valued at $15 from J. A. Vest February 12.

Leonard Lynch faces arraignment on an indictment for forgery. The true bill returned against him charges that he passed a worthless check for $150 on the First National Bank at Osborn last January 19. The check was made payable to himself and bore the purported signature of "Roy Maggart."

Sanford Miller, colored, was indicted for theft of a Chevrolet coach, 1927 model, valued at $325 from Lee Spahr last January 4.

While John Henry Meno was indicted for assaulting Walter J. Sortman last January 28.

Everybody who is slave to cathartics and laxatives will be interested in this letter—

FAIRFIELD AND OSBORN AGAIN CONSIDER PLANS FOR MERGER

Proposed consolidation of the adjoining villages of Osborn and Fairfield in Bath Twp. at the same time maintaining as far as possible the identity of each town, was debated at a mass meeting of citizens of the two villages in the assembly room of Bath Twp. Centralized School building Wednesday night.

From sentiment expressed at this meeting it is believed the merger may eventually be carried to a successful conclusion. J. C. McMillan, editor of the Bath Twp. Herald, presided at the session and called on a number of representative people for expressions of their opinion on the project.

Osborn has a population of 1,200 and Fairfield's population is estimated at 1,500. Both communities are progressive and growing rapidly.

Osborn's biggest assets are four great cement plants, the Big Four Railroad and L. C. and E. traction depots, while the internationally-known Wright Field airport is located in Fairfield territory. Under the merger plan, the consolidated city would be known either as Fairfield-Osborn or Osborn-Fairfield.

A committee composed of W. T. Naragon, O. B. Kaufman, H. L. Morgan, H. A. Pierce and Glenn Johnson was appointed to make a further investigation of the feasibility of the merger and submit a report.

If the consolidation is carried out, the public school system would not be affected as the centralized system is used in Bath Twp.

At present each village has its own town council and mayor. R. O. Routzahn serving as mayor of Fairfield and Harry E. Frahn as chief executive of Osborn. If the two villages combine, there would be but one council and one mayor.

"POKER ALICE" IS PARDONED

"Poker Alice" at 57, left; "Poker Alice," today.

By EARL B. DOUGLAS
Staff Correspondent for Central Press and The Gazette

STURGIS, S. D., March 1.—The faces around the poker table in "Poker Alice's" gambling house, in Deadwood, were nonchalant, but their nonchalance only veiled excitement. On the face of "Poker Alice" showed absolutely no flicker of tautness. She shifted her cigar to the other corner of her mouth and narrowly watched the face of the man holding the only hand besides hers. All the others had tossed their cards in. At last:

"Well, I'll see yuh," the man breathed, and added another bag of gold dust to the small mountain of bags already in the center of the table. "What yuh got, Alice?"

"Then yuh ain't goin' to raise me again?" Alice asked, and lifted an eyebrow, shifting the cigar once more. "No? Well, it's a pretty full," she said, with a sweeping gesture, displaying her cards. "Three aces and a pair of ladies. Beat that and the dust is yours."

"Take the pot," her opponent ordered, and rose. He stamped disgustedly through the door and disappeared into the night.

Better Days

Such an event as that frequently happened in Deadwood, S. D., during the gold-rush days of the '70's, when "Poker Alice," now a woman nearly 76, ran a gambling house there. In those days "Poker Alice" rolled in gold dust. She didn't even know how wealthy she was. Now she is poverty stricken, and has just been saved by Gov. W. J. Bulow from spending some of her declining years in the South Dakota penitentiary for running another gambling house in Sturgis.

"Poker Alice" is the last picturesque character of the old mauve days of the Black Hills. All the rest are in their graves.

Despite her 76 years, "Poker Alice" still is quite untamed, undaunted. She still can fire a revolver with amazing skill, and can puncture a bull's eye at 100 yards every time she pulls the trigger.

And she has a legally established record of killing one man and wounding two others with her guns and that not so many years ago.

A College Graduate

"Poker Alice" was born Alice Ivers, in Sudbury, Devonshire, England, in 1853. When she was three her parents brought her to America. The family settled in the south, where she was graduated from a woman's college. During the Civil war her father was a colonel in the Confederate army, commanding the Nineteenth Louisiana Infantry. Two of her brothers were killed in the battle of Malvern hill. Sometime after the close of the war she married and moved to Leadville, Col., with her husband, Frank F. Duffield, and there Duffield was killed in a mine explosion.

"Poker Alice" then came to Deadwood, arriving a few days after the advent of "Wild Bill Hickok" and "Calamity Jane," and being just in time for the killing and burial of "Wild Bill." The days were stirring ones. She opened a gambling house where she excelled in a game of poker. Because of her "poker" face she won the sobriquet which she ever since has carried.

She was particularly attractive in a handsome wedding gown of white tulle, with footware to match, and her veil was caught with orange blossoms. Her bridal bouquet was of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. LeSourd, his best man, Mr. William LeSourd, Xenia, brother of the bridegroom, and the Rev. Mr. Harper, pastor, entered from the side of the church and awaited the bride and her attendants at the altar. The Rev. Mr. Harper officiated at the service, using the single ring ceremony. ## BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OBEY AND LIVE.—Heed, I beseech thee, the voice of the Lord, and thou shalt live.—Jeremiah 38:20.

TRAGEDY NOT SURPRISING

The fate that overtook 48 consumers of bootleg liquor in Peoria, Ill., a few days ago, is a fate likely to overtake any person who trusts his life to the purveyor of contraband liquor by consuming his wares. A bootlegger is a criminal, and frequently a criminal ready to do murder at the drop of the hat. Sometimes he is a professional killer, who, as far as moral considerations go, is as willing to kill a patron as he is to kill a competitor or an officer of the law that gets in his way. Generally such a man is restrained by practical business consideration from knowingly poisoning his customers, except gradually; but there is a certain type of bootlegger who is not stopped even by that, if he feels he can make immediate profits from killing a few people. And it is quite impossible to tell when or where such a person will commence distributing his wares.

PROVED HIS IRON COURAGE

Honesty is a positive virtue and Mr. Coolidge has it. So is courage. He has that, too. Do you remember the iron bravery of "I do not favor a soldier's bonus"? And the rejection of McNary-Haugenism was like unto it. Thrift may be a less positive virtue, but it is not a soft one. Neither is renunciation of the crown. Coolidge has practiced and taught his people economy when they needed it most in the comeback from war waste; and he made them believe in him when he put away a presidential election that was surely his by the simple words, "I do not choose to run in 1928."

Menckens may rave against him as being a mystery and a myth. But, like Massachusetts, there he stands. And there he will stand in history. In the years to come Colvin Coolidge will be remembered as a man of unflinching moral character, as a thoroughgoing, typical American and as a man who suited the needs of his times as exactly as did Washington or Lincoln.

Your BROADWAY
By Walter Winchell And Mine

NEW YORK—Some of us were grouped in a night club corner early this evening and discussed a Broadway lass who recently wedded a well known man who is rich. It appears that the rumor spreaders are positive that the marriage didn't take.

"Isn't it a shame?" remarked one, "her young life is ruined, already."

"Oh, I dunno," said another, "she may not acquire any happiness with him, but 'Kewpie' she'll get out well alimony, and stocks and bonds."

"Mebesse," mebbes'd the first, "but did you ever sit home alone on a rainy Sunday and count coupons? It's dull diversion."

Quite alarmed, she thought of going
Very quietly away,

She was taught deceit to shun;

SUBLIMATION

Students of the mind tell us about "sublimation." It is a big word but what it means is not hard to understand. It is a sublimation to turn into more useful and finer channels the desires and forces which are aroused in us by evil impulses. There is no one who is not attacked from time to time by evil desires and by impulses which are against the best interests of other people. Our first tendency is to let these impulses have their way. Unrestrained, they lead to various kinds of failure. Satisfying and restraining impulses is not easy, and it is not the best way. The best way is to be so busy at some useful work, so engaged either with a job or a hobby, that the force of the impulse is diverted into another channel. This is a practical method. This is sublimation.

TRADE OVER THERE

More than a half billion dollars worth of automobiles were sold abroad in 1928 by firms in the United States. A few years ago we were wondering what was going to become of the business and industrial world if European markets were not soon restored. Apparently the United States is not the only nation feeling the thrill of prosperity. Nations abroad buying more than 500 million dollars worth of motor cars must be feeling well-to-do.

GERMANY

Speaking of European nations that are picking up in business, it is the impression that Germany is doing the best. Germany has "come back" since the World war in marvelous fashion. This summer the International Advertising Association will be holding its great convention in Berlin. It is freely predicted that the German people will take that unusual occasion to show the world—and America in particular—how far they have come.

Germany, following the armistice of 1918, was apparently in the depths of debt and despair. But when the spirit refuses to accept ruin, there is no ruin. And there is no entirely reliable substitute for hard work and long hours.

THE DESIRE TO BUY

E. P. Blanchard, chairman of the production division of the American Society of Automotive Engineers, figures that in this year of 1929 the American people will go down into their pockets and checkbooks and spend more than six and a half billions of dollars for cars, accessories, and replacement parts. Saturation? There can be no saturation of the motor market until a new race of men and women, created without the desire to buy new cars, are born and reared. Smart salesmen know they do not have to count on the NEED of automobiles. They have to count only on the DESIRE for automobiles.

REASONABLE RATES FOR CREDIT AT ALL TIMES

BY ROY A. YOUNG

Governor, Federal Reserve Board (Roy Archibald Young was born at Marquette, Mich., May 17, 1882. He obtained a high school education and in 1900 began as a messenger in the First National bank at Marquette. He later held the same position with the First National bank at Lake Linden, Mich. From 1913 to 1917 he was vice president of the Citizens National bank at Houghton, Mich. He was named governor of the Federal Reserve bank at Minneapolis in 1919 and is now governor of the Federal Reserve board at Washington.

The year 1928, the year covered by the 15th annual report of the Federal Reserve board, has been a year of active business, of continued growth in the demand for credit, and of a rising level of money rates. Industrial activity, which had receded in the latter part of 1927, recovered and reached new high levels in 1928.

Agriculture production was large, and the income of farmers was at about the same level as the year before. The flow of commodities through channels of trade to consumers kept pace with production, and there was no accumulation of inventories. Commodity prices, which had begun to advance in the summer of 1927, continued to rise through most of 1928, but receded in the last quarter of the year, and in December were at the same level as to the close of the preceding year.

Gold withdrawals on a large scale and continued growth of bank credit resulted in an increased demand for reserve bank credit, and, owing to security sales by the reserve banks, in an even larger increase of indebtedness to the Federal Reserve banks.

As a consequence, money rates advanced to the highest level in seven years. Rate advances, however, were much sharper for loans on securities than for commercial loans, and there was no evidence of unfavorable effects of higher money rates on trade and industry.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY NINE HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What makes the glorious Easter parades that march so gaily up and down the broad avenues and main streets of our country? Spring clothes? Partly. Spring flowers and faces? Certainly, yes. But what about the figures? Can bright new costumes and well-groomed faces, charming corsages or boutonnières ever be worn to their best advantage over any but lovely figures?

Gay, marching figures! How important they are to any triumph parade! Lithe figures, firm figures, young figures. Not thin ones, no! Not fat ones. (Such ugly words, thin and fat.) But "just-right" figures. Well proportioned to their height, strong, healthy, well.

And easy to have. Any woman may have a good figure who is willing to take some small trouble. Exercise, of course, and diet. Either alone or both together will build up or reduce a figure to its proper weight and contour.

Because exercise must be taken vigorously and often—spasmodic exercise taken half-heartedly never helps to affect any appreciable change, and because modern women are impatient of time, they usually prefer to change their figures by diet. Pounds can be taken off or put on rapidly by the correct method of eating. But remember, some exercise should accompany any reducing or gaining program so that the flesh and muscles will not be flabby and soft. Firm contour lines come with good circulation and exercise.

The too-thin woman has the easier time in planning her diet. What she must do is eat fattening foods, sugars, starches, cream and milk, oils in her salads, oily fish and milk. She should eat often and not too much at a time, but make sure that plenty of calories are included.

The too-fat woman has to cut down on calories. Eat the fruits and leafy vegetables that have vitamins and mineral salts without much sugar or starch. Vinegar and lemon juice she may use on her salads, but no oil except mineral oil.

A good reducing diet is the "vegetable bouillon cure." With this diet one may eat often of a palatable vegetable soup and still lose weight. It has the advantages of the stronger "starvation cures."

To make the bouillon take three quarts of cold water and one quart of lentils. Put these in a kettle, without salt, and bring to a boil. Let boil about 15 minutes; then add a little salt. Next add two pounds of carrots sliced or cut in cubes, and boil for another 15 minutes, at the end of which time a half-pound of turnips and two or three leeks (or onions, cut in large pieces) are to go "into the soup." The whole should then simmer gently for one and one-half hours.

To take this cure you may begin your day with fruit and coffee, followed by a bowl of soup and the vegetables. At two o'clock and at four drink another bowl of the bouillon, and at six or seven another. Before going to bed take the final large bowl, which will finish the day's quantity. During the day if you feel too "hollow," you may suck now and then on a pure licorice stick. This diet taken on two days of a week or on three successive days, or on alternate days—for quicker reducing results, will bring down your weight remarkably. But watch your scales not to get under weight. Remember the ideal spring figure!

end yet." Nevertheless, he added, "If anyone called and wanted to see him, as a public servant he considered it his business to be seen, with no undue delay about it."

"The truth is," continued the secretary, who, though elevated to his post in Mr. Hoover's official family from the presidency of Stanford university, primarily is a doctor of medicine, "I am still busy diagnosing my various patients' cases"—meaning his departmental problems.

"I don't want to make the mistake of treating any of them, say, as measles, only to find out too late that the disease really, for instance, is typhoid."

Whether or not the remark intended to imply by its remark that there appear to him to be things in the interior department which need remedying I am unable to state certainly. I tried to persuade him to amplify, but he only repeated that he was "on the receiving end yet."

as an individual.

In point of fact, the doctor strongly suggests his elder—he is only 54 and there are eight years between them.

He resembles him facially, even to his gold-rimmed glasses. He resembles him in his tremendous stature—6 feet 2 or 2 at least—but is still very spare, though he looks fit and active, whereas Curtis D. has taken on a good deal of corpulence.

The two are much alike also in kindness and consideration of manner and humor of expression. Thoroughly nice people!

Dr. Wilbur may be on the "receiving end" of the interior department thus far, but he did not seem interested for a long while in such questions as the department principally deals with, and has given them considerable study.

This might be surmised to include power questions, among others—especially in a Californian, like the doctor.

There seemed to be nothing to gain by asking him for his views, as between public and private development of power projects—after what President Hoover said relative to the "government in business," in his inaugural speech.

Dr. Hubert Work, who preceded Dr. Wilbur as head of the interior department with only the few months' interval of Secretary Nathan, too, but Dr. Work was an alienist, while Dr. Wilbur's earlier professional specialty was plain physiology.

Was this latter preparation for a cabinet position than the branch of psychiatry?

When the Californian laughed and said he didn't know, as to cabinet posts in general, but it seemed to him as if almost any sort of medical education ought to be considered good training for the consideration of interior problems.

As previously remarked, the doctor looks as if he had a sense of humor.

Diet and Health

BY LILL HUNT PETERS, M.D., AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Vegetarianism Portions of Foods

"I have a friend who, on account of religious scruples, never eats meat of any kind, not even fish or poultry. To her, they are all dead flesh. What I want to know is this: Is it possible for such a person, by substituting milk, eggs, cheese, nuts, etc., to be strong, robust and energetic? This particular young woman is very undernourished, but still refuses, in horror, to touch any meat."

"If you think it possible to be a strict vegetarian and still be robust, will you suggest what would be a good day's menu for this young woman of 25, who lives the life of an average home-maker, and is a present quiet, low in energy and weight, but refuses to take her doctor's advice that she eat meat?"

"Certainly one can get along without flesh foods and maintain health, Mrs. M., for many do. But more conscious efforts must be directed towards getting sufficient of the other protein foods. Nuts (with the exception of chestnuts), cheese, eggs, milk, all furnish a good proportion of high-grade protein. The legumes and the whole grains also furnish a fair proportion, but proteins are not biologically complete—that is, they lack one of the elements necessary for growth and repair, so they must be supplemented with the complete type."

It is not infrequently happens that those who haven't studied dietetics and go on a non-flesh diet, take insufficient protein. The average person should have (depending upon the size of the frame) 250 to 350 calories of protein a day. I'll give you a list of foods with their protein content, and have your friend guide herself by that. If she is undernourished she should take more liberal amounts of these foods for a while, to build up her wasted tissues.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

A perturbed youngster wants to know which of two suitors she shall marry. She is engaged to one and has known and "gone with" him for three years. The other she met recently. As she is only 21 she started "going with" the first when she was 15. I take it, and is getting a bit restless because he tries to "boss" her.

In cards it is an old saying that "when in doubt play trumps." This is not always a safe rule to follow in cards. When in doubt in love, I'd say just sit tight and wait for the vision to clear a bit. That's sensible. You don't HAVE to marry, you know. You expect and hope it to be for life when you do marry, but you are able to the sound of the wedding march, so better not be in a hurry about it if there is the slightest bit of doubt in your own mind that the one to whom you are betrothed is not the ONE person in the world for you.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 15 years old and engaged. I have gone with this fellow for three years. I am motherless and know of none to advise me. I have now met another fellow who also wants to go with me. I have been trying for two weeks to decide, but haven't rotten anywhere. I feel so unhappy that I don't know what to do. The one to whom I am engaged is a very serious fellow. The other is not so serious, but is advancing better in business than the other. They are both good looking and liked by everyone. I have gotten dissatisfied because the one to whom I am engaged is always finding fault and tries to boss me. The other doesn't care what I do. I believe I am old enough to marry, as I have been taking care of myself for two years. WAITING."

Which ever one you take, waiting, you are bound sometimes to wish you had taken the other. You have gone with the first so long, and the second is a new fellow. You are bound sometimes to wish you had taken the other. You have gone with the first so long, and the second is a new fellow. You are bound sometimes to wish you had taken the other. You have gone with the first so long, and the second is a new fellow.

LEFTOVER: I certainly took a wrong turn up the first chap in "going" with him means marriage. And as to the other, if he is satisfied with your girl friend, what are you going to do about it? Vamp him away from her? I don't believe so. The doubtfully young man can't do any better than others, as you say, but if one-half of one really prefers the other half of one's own couple to one-half the other's, you get what I mean—wait one to do about it? Wait—let things work out, say!

B. D. You neglected to stamp addressed envelope for a personal letter. This wouldn't have mattered so much if your question had been imperative in need of an answer, but I think that if I tell you to let the first man go and be true to the one you love, you will be satisfied, won't you?

"Why—what—what?" gasped he, "Drake, unable to hide his amusement any longer, burst out laughing."

"Of course you are trying to ask who the Drake was upon whom you spied. I can tell you I am not sure I would have guessed if you had not mentioned that his wife called him Danny, but that is the name of my tame cousin who has lived all his life in yonder mill pond."

"Danny looks a great deal like me only I am a little larger, my wings are stronger—although, of course, you could not tell that! On thinking it over I do not know that I wonder at your mistaking me for him! Never tell Danny, though, how you spied upon him. He would never forgive you. I place I shouldn't if I were in his place. But of course since it was not I upon whom you played such a shabby trick there is no reason for my being mad at you."

"Well, if you are not your cousin," began the boy, but again Drake interrupted him.

"Of course I am not my cousin," cried he, chuckling heartily at what he thought was a great joke. "Then who are you?" at last the boy managed to get the question out.

"Of course the bird, but he bow while in the water, but he Next: "Dear Old Dad Turns Into an Ice Bird."

Sometimes he is a professional killer, who, as far as moral considerations go, is as willing to kill a patron as he is to kill a competitor or an officer of the law that gets in his way. Generally such a man is restrained by practical business consideration from knowingly poisoning his customers, except gradually; but there is a certain type of bootlegger who is not stopped even by that, if he feels he can make immediate profits from killing a few people. And it is quite impossible to tell when or where such a person will commence distributing his wares.

PROVED HIS IRON COURAGE

Honesty is a positive virtue and Mr. Coolidge has it. So is courage. He has that, too. Do you remember the iron bravery of "I do not favor a soldier's bonus?" And the rejection of McNary-Haugenism was like unto it. Thrift is a less positive virtue, but it is not a soft one. Neither is renunciation of the crown. Coolidge has practiced and taught his people economy when they needed it most in the comeback from war waste; and he made them believe him when he put away a presidential election that was surely his by the simple words, "I do not choose to run in 1928."

Menckens may rave against him as being a mystery and a myth. But, like Massachusetts, there he stands. And there he will stand in history. In the years to come Colvin Coolidge will be remembered as a man of unflinching moral character, as a thoroughgoing, typical American and as a man who suited the needs of his times as exactly as did Washington or Lincoln.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK—Some of us were grouped in a night club corner early this morning and discussed a Broadway lass who recently wedded a well known man who is rich. It appears that the rumor spreaders are positive that the marriage didn't take.

"Isn't it a shame?" remarked one, "her young life is ruined, already."

"Oh, I dunno," said another, "she may not acquire any happy news with him, but eventually she'll get some swell alimony, and stocks and bonds."

"Mebbeso," mebbes'd the first, "but did you ever sit home alone on a rainy Sunday and count coupons? It's dull diversion."

ROTHSTEIN'S GHOST WALKS
The ghost of Arnold Rothstein again stalked the board when members of the cast of "Keep Shuffling" asked, through Actors' Equity, two weeks' pay from the Beckman Credit Corporation, controlled by the late gambling czar. The demand was made in an arbitration hearing under the rules of the American Arbitration Association, and the actors were awarded $4,257.67 of a total claim of $6,920.75 for salaries and carfare from Chicago.

As though sufficient publicity had not attended the multifarious activities of Rothstein, Ivy Lee noted publicity ace, was chairman of the board of arbitration, which included H. S. Kraft, producer-manager, and Walter Hingham, actor.

Herman Finkelstein of the Nathan Berkson offices, representing the Rothstein estate, contended the Equity's Chicago agent had breached a verbal contract to permit the cast of "Keep Shuffling" to "go commonwealth" in Chicago and halted the show after a single performance in the last week of the run had been given. Equity said the troupe was withdrawn because salaries had been unpaid for the week previous. A number of the members on the happy-go-lucky, all-colored cast testified.

Evening matters
Broadway hasn't forgotten the so-called feud via printer's ink of George Jean Nathan and Alexander Woolcott, the critics. After a series of pokes at each other, Nathan tagged Woolcott "The Solidity powder of Times Square." Not long after Woolcott was in tribia, N. Y., and called on the editor of the Cornell Widow, which Nathan managed when he was at that college.

"I will give you $10,000 for all of George Jean Nathan's writings, a your college publication," bargained Woolcott.

"But why?" asked the infuriated editor.

"Because I can get $20,000 for them in New York from Nathan, who probably wants them suppressed?" was the snotty retort.

INCIDENTALLY
Speaking of Woolcott recalls his debut as a dramatic reviewer. It was in 1914 when the N. Y. Times promoted him from the re-

SUBLIMATION

Students of the mind tell us about "sublimation." It is a big word but what it means is not hard to understand. To sublimate means to turn into more useful and finer channels the desires and forces which are aroused in us by evil impulses. There is no one who is not attacked from time to time by evil desires and by impulses which are against the best interests of other people. Our first tendency is to let these impulses have their way. Unrestrained, they lead to various kinds of failure. Sitting idly and restraining impulse is not easy, and it is not the best way. The best way is to be so busy at some useful work, so engaged either with a job or a hobby, that the force of the impulse is diverted into another channel. This is a practical method. This is sublimation.

TRADE OVER THERE

More than a half billion dollars worth of automobiles were sold abroad in 1928 by firms in the United States. A few years ago we were wondering what was going to become of the business and industrial world if European markets were not soon restored. Apparently the United States is not the only nation feeling the thrill of prosperity. Nations abroad buying more than 500 million dollars worth of motor cars must be feeling well-to-do.

GERMANY

Speaking of European nations that are picking up in business, it is the impression that Germany is going the best. Germany has "come back" since the World war in marvelous fashion. This summer the International Advertising Association will be holding its great convention in Berlin. It is freely predicted that the German people will take that unusual occasion to show the world—and America in particular—how far they have come.

Germany, following the armistice of 1918, was apparently in the depths of debt and despair. But when the spirit refuses to accept ruin, there is no ruin. And there is no entirely reliable substitute for hard work and long hours.

THE DESIRE TO BUY

E. P. Blanchard, chairman of the production division of the American Society of Automotive Engineers, figures that in this year of 1929 the American people will go down into their pockets and checkbooks and spend more than six and a half billions of dollars for cars, accessories, and replacement parts. Saturation? There can be no saturation of the motor market until a new race of men and women, created without the desire to buy new cars, are born and reared. Smart salesmen know that they do not have to count on the NEED of automobiles. They have to count only on the DESIRE for automobiles.

REASONABLE RATES FOR CREDIT AT ALL TIMES FORECAST

By ROY A. YOUNG

Governor, Federal Reserve Board (Roy Archibald Young was born at Marquette, Mich., May 17, 1882. He obtained a high school education and in 1900 began as a messenger in the First National bank at Marquette. He became assistant cashier and later held the same position with the First National bank at Lake Linden, Mich. From 1913 to 1917 he was vice president of the Citizens National bank at Houghton, Mich. He was named governor of the Federal Reserve bank at Minneapolis in 1919 and is now governor of the Federal Reserve board at Washington.

The year 1928, the year covered by the 15th annual report of the Federal Reserve board, has been a year of active business, of continued growth in the demand for credit, and of a rising level of money rates. Industrial commodities which had receded in the latter part of 1927, recovered and reached new high levels in 1928.

Agriculture production was large, and the income of farmers was at about the same level as the year before. The flow of commodities through channels of trade to consumers kept pace with production, and there was no accumulation of inventories.

Commodity prices, which had begun to advance in the summer of 1927, continued to rise through most of 1928, but receded in the last quarter of the year, and in December were at the same level as to the close of the preceding year.

Gold withdrawals on a large scale and continued growth of bank credit resulted in an increased demand for reserve bank credit, and, owing to security sales by the reserve banks, in an even larger increase of indebtedness of member banks.

As a consequence, money rates advanced to the highest level in seven years. Rate advances, however, were much sharper for loans on securities than for commercial loans, and there was no evidence of unfavorable effects of higher money rates on trade and industry.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY NINE HELENA RUBINSTEIN

What makes the glorious Easter parades that march so gaily up and down the broad avenues and main streets of our country? Spring clothes? Partly. Spring flowers and faces? Certainly, yes. But what about the figures? Can bright new costumes and checkbooks and spend more than six and a half billions of dollars for cars, accessories, and replacement parts. Saturation? There can be no saturation of the motor market until a new race of men and women, created without the desire to buy new cars, are born and reared. Smart salesmen know that they do not have to count on the NEED of automobiles. They have to count only on the DESIRE for automobiles.

And easy to have. Any woman may have a good figure who is willing to take same small trouble. Exercise, of course, and diet. Either alone or both together will build up or reduce a figure to its proper weight and contour.

Because exercise must be taken vigorously and often—sprightly never helps to affect any appreciable change, and because modern women are impatient of time they usually prefer to change their figures by diet.

Such can be taken off or put on rapidly by the correct method of eating. But remember, some exercise should accompany any reducing or gaining program so that the flesh and muscles will not be flabby and soft. Firm contour lines come with good circulation and exercise.

The too-thin woman has the easier time in planning her diet. What she in the interior department is almost unchangeable, and milk, oils, her salads, jelly fish and milk. She should eat often and not too much at a time, but make sure that plenty of calories are included.

The too-fat woman has to cut down on calories. Eat the fruits and leafy vegetables that have vitamins and mineral salts without much sugar or starch. Vinegar and lemon juice she may use on her salads, but no oil except mineral oil.

A good reducing diet is the "vegetable bouillon cure." With this diet one may eat often of a palatable vegetable soup and still lose weight. It has the advantage of the stronger "starvation cure."

To make the bouillon take three quarts of cold water and one quart of lentils. Put these in a kettle, without salt, and bring to a boil. Let boil about 15 minutes, then add a little salt. Next add two pounds of carrots sliced or cut in cubes, and boil for another 15 minutes. At the end of which time a half-pound of turnips and two or three leeks or onions cut in large pieces are to go "into the soup."

The whole should then simmer gently for one and one-half hours. To take this cure you may begin your day with fruit and coffee, followed by a bowl of soup and its vegetables. At two o'clock and at four drink another bowl of the bouillon, and at six or seven another. Before going to bed take the final large bowl, which will finish the day's quantity. During the day if you feel too "hollow," you may suck, now and then, on a pure licorice stick.

This diet taken on two days of a week or on three successive days, or on alternate days—for quicker reducing results, will bring down your weight remarkably. But watch your scales not to get under weight. Remember the ideal spring figure!

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur is the easiest cabinet member to get to that I ever encountered.

His desk is just around the corner from the main entrance to the White House. It is almost invisible from the door way but within reach of the official usher, who instantly passed my card to the new secretary himself, and already was pointing me to a hatrack as the doctor's voice invited, "Come in."

Such celerity in a government department is almost uncanny, and leaves a visitor rather breathless and unprepared with the questions he had intended to ask. However, it probably did not greatly matter for Dr. Wilbur had been in the cabinet barely 24 hours at the time, and frankly explained, "I'm on the receiving end yet."

Nevertheless, he added, "If anyone called and wanted to see him, as a public servant he considered it his business to be seen, with no undue delay about it."

"The truth is," continued the secretary, who, though elevated to his post in Mr. Hoover's official family from the presidency of Stanford University, primarily is a doctor of medicine, "I am still busy diagnosing my various patients' cases"—meaning his departmental problems.

"I don't want to make the mistake of treating any of them, say, as measles, only to find out too late that the disease really, for instance, is typhoid."

Whether or not the doctor intended to imply by his remark that there appear to him to be things in the interior department which need remedying I am unable to state certainly. I tried to persuade him to amplify, but he only repeated that he was "on the receiving end yet."

Anyone who meets Dr. Wilbur, after some little acquaintance with his brother, Curtis Dwight Wilbur, the recently retired secretary of the navy, cannot possibly expect to find him anything but an exceptionally fine fellow.

There may be a plurality of opinions concerning some of Secretary Wilbur's naval policies, but there can be no two as to his all-around admirable qualities as an individual.

In point of fact, the doctor strongly suggests his elder—he is only 54 and there are eight years between them.

He resembles him facially, even to his gold-bowed glasses. He resembles him in his tremendous stature—6 feet 2 or 2 at least—but is still very spare, though he looks fit and active, whereas Curtis D. has taken on a good deal of embonpoint.

The two are much alike also in kindness and consideration of manner and humor of expression. Thoroughly nice people!

Dr. Wilbur may be on the "receiving end" of the interior department thus far, but he did drop the observation that he has been interested for a long while in such questions as the department principally deals with, and has given them considerable study.

This might be surmised to include power questions, among others—especially in a Californian, like the doctor.

There seemed to be nothing to gain by asking him for his views, as between public and private development of power projects—after what President Hoover said relative to the "government in business," in his inaugural speech, and his appointment of Dr. Wilbur to his cabinet. Nevertheless, the doctor's reputation is rather that of a liberal than a conservative.

Dr. Hubert Work, who preceded Dr. Wilbur as head of the interior department, with only the few months' interval of Secretary Roy O. West's administration separating them, was a medical man, too, but Dr. Work was an alienist, while Dr. Wilbur's earlier professional specialty was plain physiology.

Was this latter training—I wondered—a better preparation for a cabinet position than the branch of psychiatry?

Whereat the Californian laughed and said he didn't know, as to cabinet posts in general, but it seemed to him as if almost any sort of medical education ought to be considered good training for the consideration of interior problems.

As previously remarked, the doctor looks as if he had a sense of humor.

Now it was Peter's turn to be astonished.

"Why—what—what?" gasped he, and Drake, unable to hide his amusement any longer, burst out laughing.

"Quack! Quack! Quack! Don't think yourself quite as smart as you did, my fine Two-Legs, do you?"

"Of course you are trying to ask who the Drake was upon whom you spied. I can tell you, I am not sure I would have guessed if he had not mentioned that his wife called him 'Danny,' that is, she named after my tame cousin who has lived all his life in yonder mill pond."

"Danny looks a great deal like me only I am a little larger, my wings are stronger—although, of course, you could not tell that! On thinking it over I do not know that I wonder at your mistaking me for him! Never tell Danny, though, how you spied upon him. He would never forgive you. I know I shouldn't if I were in his place. But of course since it was not I upon whom you played such a shabby trick there is no reason for my being mad at you."

"Well, if you are not your cousin," began the boy, but again Drake interrupted him.

"Of course I am not my cousin," cried he, chuckling heartily at what he thought was a great joke. "Then I am sure of my last trick, but he managed to get the question out."

Of course the bird could not bow while in the water, but he did something that looked very much like it.

Bending his long neck, Drake leaned towards the boy, his head upon his chest. He looked so comical, twisted up like this, that Peter almost laughed, but remembering his manners in time, too, he kept his mouth shut.

"I am Wild Drake of the Frost North," quacked the bird, as Peter knew at once from the tone of his voice that the fellow was quite as proud of himself as an other bird he had met.

"Let me tell you right now young Two-Legs, there is no place like home, that is, of course, where the weather is right. I miss home more and more every length further I fly from it, but I choose nobody with common sense will let his love for a place stand in the way of saving his life."

"Jack Frost came along a few days ago and painted the marsh lands white, and right away I told my family that it was time to start for warmer climates. The birds here are so stupid that they wait one more day, and would you believe me, when we woke up this night we found that Jack Frost was having a party and had invited his two best friends, Snow and Ice to come."

"When we heard those tv were on their way we wasted 1 more time in delay but took our wings at once."

"Snow and Ice are the worst enemies we Wild Drakes have. I just loves to steal upon a Duck while he is fishing and freeze 7 feet fast in the pond."

Next: "Dear Old Dad Tar Into an Ice Bird."

Diet and Health

Vegetarianism Portions of Foods Calories of Protein

"I have a friend who, on account of religious scruples, never eats any kind of meat, not even fish or poultry. To her, they are all dead flesh. What I want to know is this: Is it possible for such a person, by substituting milk, eggs, cheese, nuts, etc., to be strong, robust and energetic? This particular young woman is very unattractive, but still refuses, in horror, to touch any meat."

"If you think it possible to be a strict vegetarian and still be robust, will you suggest what would be a good lay's menu for this young woman of 25, who lives the life of an average housewife, and is at present quite low in energy and weight, but refuses to take her doctor's advice that she eat meat?" "A. S. M."

Certainly one can get along without flesh foods and maintain health, Mrs. M., for many do it. But more conscious efforts must be directed towards getting sufficient of the other protein foods. Nuts (with the exception of chestnuts), cheese, eggs, milk, all furnish a good proportion of high grade protein. The legumes and the whole grains also furnish a fair proportion, but proteins are not biologically complete—that is, they lack some of the elements necessary for growth and repair, so they must be supplemented with the complete type.

It not infrequently happens that those who haven't studied dietetics and go on a non-flesh diet, take insufficient protein. The average person should average (depending upon the size of the frame) 250 to 350 calories of protein a day. I'll give you a list of foods with their protein content, and have your friend guide herself by that. If she is undernourished, she should take more liberal amounts of these foods for a while, to build up her wasted tissues.

A perturbed youngster wants to know which of two suitors she shall marry. She is engaged to one and has known and "gone with" him for three years. The other met her recently. As she is only 21, how she started "going with" the first when she was 18, I take it, and is getting a bit restless because he tries to "boss" her.

In cards it is an old saying that "when in doubt play trumps." This is not always a safe rule to follow in cards. What in doubt in love, I'd say, "let it fight and wait for the victor to clear a bit. That's sensible. You don't HAVE to marry, you know. You expect and hope it to be for life when you do march down the aisle to the sound of the wedding march, so better not be in a hurry about it if there is the slightest bit of doubt in your own mind that the one to whom you are betrothed is not the ONE person in the world for you."

This might be surmised to include power questions, among others—especially in a Californian, like the doctor.

Although these all-Miami Valley League basketball teams for the 1929 season were chosen with some consideration as to how the teams finished in the league race, nevertheless the selections seem to represent the strength of the league fairly accurately. The selections for the most part were based on personal observation of the players in action and not on statistics.

Incidentally, the second team would not rank very far below the first in all-around effectiveness.

The league coaches have not made known their selections for the honor teams but it remains to be seen whether the makeup of the first all-star team, at least, can be improved upon by the mentors of the six teams.

An interesting piece of information for the fans in the present home run era, is the distance from the home plate to the outfield barriers in the major league parks. These measurements give a general idea of the carry necessary to put the ball outside the reach of the fielders. But allowance must be made in most cases for high concrete wall and in some instances a screen stretched atop.

The measurements take into consideration the changes made at Braves Field, Boston, after the officials of that club had again lengthened the left side of the field to do away with "trick home runs" which became too numerous early in the 1928 season. The changes were made last August.

Here are the measurements of the National League parks:

Boston
Home to right field.....297 ft. 9 in.
Home to left field.....353 ft. 6 in.
Home to center field.....387 ft. 2 in.

Brooklyn
Home to right field.....301 ft.
Home to left field.....383 ft. 8 in.

Home to center field.....447 ft.

Cincinnati

Philadelphia

Babe Ruth, baseball's swat king, has a world's series batting average of .325. Babe has batted against twenty-eight pitchers in world's series games. Only seven have denied him a hit. Two of these—Hallahan and Reinhart, of the Cardinals—kept George Herman's average to .000 by walking him on the lone occasions they faced him, or to put it the other way around, the occasions he faced them. Sherrod Smith held Babe hitless in five trips to the plate. The Babe's average against righthanders in world's series games is .348, against lefthanders, .289 and for both types .325.

Two records of interest to fans in general, and the subject of constant discussion, are the longest throw of a baseball on record and the fastest time for circling bases. The former is held by Sheldens Lejeune, who, at Cincinnati, October 12, 1910, heaved the horseshoe a distance of 426 feet, 9 1/2 inches. On September 1, 1921, Maurice Archdeacon, of Rochester, established a new mark for circling the bases by completing the distance in 13.25 seconds. At least these two records of long standing remained unmoored during the 1928 season.

REHEARSALS GOING FORWARD ON GUILD PRODUCTION HERE

Satisfactory progress is being made in rehearsals for the three-act comedy entitled, "To the Ladies", the second Xenia Little Theater Guild production of the current season, which will be presented at City Hall Theater Friday night, March 22.

Talented local Thespians who compose the cast are being directed by Miss Esther Muriel Smith, local dramatic teacher. The stage settings for the play are in charge of Isadore Hyman and George Swartz.

This Guild production will be a closed performance to members only. The recent Guild presentation of the Pulitzer prize winner, "Craig's Wife", aroused such favorable comment that many Xenians are taking advantage of the opportunity to buy season tickets that will enable them to see the last three plays to be given this season by the guild. These tickets may be purchased at Jones' drug store, E. Main St.

Miss Helen Hurley and John Wood, well-known local amateur performers, have the leading parts in the comedy to be presented.

SPORT SCRIBES' ALL-STAR TEAMS

Picking all-star teams is inaccurate at best but here are the 1929 first and second honor teams of the Miami Valley Basketball League, selected by six sport scribes:

| First Team  | Pos. | Second Team               |
|---|------|---------------------------|
| Collins, Sidney (12)  | F.   | C. Black, Piqua (5)       |
| Bell-Scurry, Xenia (8)  | F.   | Everhardt, Greenville (4) |
| Buell, Xenia (12)   | C.   | Sargeant, Piqua (3)       |
| Gibney, Xenia (9)   | G.   | Smittle, Xenia (5)        |
| Hilbert, Piqua (9)  | G.   | Allen, Sidney (3)         |
| Honorable mention: Dimmatoo, Miamiburg forward (3); Neth, Piqua forward (2); Stenke, Greenville guard (2); Weaver, Xenia forward (1); Rehmet, Troy guard (1); Kritzer, Sidney center (1); Hieble, Miamiburg center (1); Steffens, Sidney guard (1). |      |                           |

the loss of a game, a remarkable record, places four players, and Piqua and Sidney one each on the first mythical all-star

The first and second honor teams were compiled for The Gazette by the sport scribes of the six cities having schools represented in the circuit.

Two league stars were unanimous selections, namely, Buell, Xenia center, and Collins, Sidney forward. Twelve votes were possible for every player and these two stars received twelve apiece, counting two for first team choice and

It will be noticed that Scurry and Bell, Xenia forwards, tied in the voting and consequently each player is placed on the first team, dividing one forward post.

The selection job was a difficult matter because of the number of competent players for almost every position. These teams are perhaps not the teams that everyone is agreed upon but they represent the best talent and a majority of the best players in their positions in the league last season.

It may look as if the scribes favor Xenia at the expense of other league teams but it must be remembered that the winning of the championship without the loss of a game entitled Xenia to especial consideration.

Miamiburg and Troy are the only league schools which are not represented on either honor quintet.

Although almost unanimous choices prevailed for the first team, there was some uncertainty as to the makeup of the second group. The second team, however, is made up of players who might give the first team plenty of competition.

Right away when we begin to analyze the center men we see at a glance that the fight is narrowed down to one man. Even at first blush there could be no other player for the pivot position except Robert Buell, Xenia center. He was a unanimous choice of all the scribes and his selection was quite clear-cut and decisive.

Buell is of good height, weight and physical power, fair speed and scoring ability, lots of drive, was good on defense and usually obtained the tip-off on the center jump. He was easily the outstanding center in the league.

Collins, Sidney star, shares the honor with Buell of being a unanimous choice, as he was last year. In many ways he was the most brilliant performer in the league. Possessing all the requisites of a finished player, Collins, with a stronger team, would have looked even better. While no figures are available, he was probably the highest scorer in the league last season.

G. O. P. Leaders Stirred

New York Republican leaders were flabbergasted when Chairman Hubert Work of the National Committee of the State received a curt note of resignation from the only woman member, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin.

No reasons were given by her but those best informed say that she will probably become identified with a woman's crusade for modification or repeal of the dry law.

BUCCANEERS WILL CROWN QUEEN AT DANCE

The most popular girl at Xenia Central High School has been chosen by the student body to be crowned on Friday night on the occasion of the "Buccaneer Hop," a dance to be held in the school gymnasium honoring the Buccaneer basketball team, champions of the Miami Valley League for the second consecutive season.

Students took a vote Thursday afternoon to decide the most popular girl and she will be crowned "Queen of the Buccaneers" at a special ceremony which will take place during intermission of the dance.

A faculty committee composed of Miss Olive Allen, chairman, and Miss Faye Cavanaugh and O. B. Bogart was appointed to count the votes.

This is a new custom. It was inaugurated by the senior class this year and may be followed annually in succeeding years.

The "Queen of the Buccaneers" will be crowned with a wreath of roses by Superintendent Louis Hammerle and will then be escorted to a throne, from where she will watch the grand march, which will last until the dance intermission is ended.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Although these all-Miami Valley League basketball teams for the 1929 season were chosen with some consideration as to how the teams finished in the league race, nevertheless the selections seem to represent the strength of the league fairly accurately. The selections for the most part were based on personal observation of the players in action and not on statistics.

Incidentally, the second team would not rank very far below the first in all-around effectiveness.

The league coaches have not made known their selections for the honor teams but it remains to be seen whether the makeup of the first all-star team, at least, can be improved upon by the mentors of the six teams.

An interesting piece of information for the fans in the present home run era, is the distance from the home plate to the outfield barriers in the major league parks. These measurements give a general idea of the carry necessary to put the ball outside the reach of the fielders. But allowance must be made in most cases for high concrete wall and in some instances a screen stretched atop.

The measurements take into consideration the changes made at Braves Field, Boston, after the officials of that club had again lengthened the left side of the field to do away with "rick home runs," which became too numerous early in the 1928 season. The changes were made last August.

Here are the measurements of the National League parks:

Babe Ruth, baseball's swat king, has a world's series batting average of .325. Babe has batted against twenty-eight pitchers in world's series games, only seven having denied him a hit. Two of these—Hallahan and Reinhardt, of the Cardinals—kept George Herman's average to .000 by walking him on the lone occasions they faced him, or to put it the other way around, the occasions he faced them. Sherrod Smith held Babe hitless in five trips to the plate. The Babe's average against right-handers in world's series games is .318, against left-handers, .289 and for both .325.

Two records of interest to fans in general, and the subject of constant discussion, are the longest throw of a baseball on record and the fastest time for circling bases. The former is held by Sheldon Lejeune, who, at Cincinnati, October 12, 1910, heaved the horseshoe a distance of 426 feet, 9 1/2 inches. On September 1, 1921, Maurice Archdeacon, of Rochester, established a new mark for circling the bases by completing the distance in 13 2/5 seconds. At least these two records of long standing remained unmoled during the 1928 season.

REHEARSALS GOING FORWARD ON GUILD PRODUCTION HERE

Satisfactory progress is being made in rehearsals for the third comedy entitled, "The Ladies," the second Xenia Little Theater Guild production of the current season, which will be presented at City Hall Theater Friday night, March 22.

Talented local thespians who compose the cast are being directed by Miss Esther Muriel Smith, local dramatic teacher. The stage settings for the play are in charge of Isadore Hyman and George Swartz.

This Guild production will be a closed performance to members only. The recent Guild presentation of the Pulitzer prize winner, "Craig's Wife," aroused such favorable comment that many Xenians are taking advantage of the opportunity to buy season tickets that will enable them to see the last three plays to be given this season by the guild. These tickets may be purchased at Jones' drug store, E. Main St.

Miss Helen Hurley and John Wood, well-known local amateur performers, have the leading parts in the comedy to be presented.

Four Xenians On Miami Valley All-Star Team

BUELL, GIBNEY, SCURRY AND BELL PLACED ON FIRST TEAM

Buell Is Unanimous Choice As Is Collins Of Sidney; Hilbert Of Piqua Gets Other Position; Sport Writers Pick Two Teams

By PHIL FRAME

We can usually look to the champion team for a nucleus of the all-Miami Valley League basketball team and the year 1929 proved no exception to this rule.

Xenia Central High School's "Buccaneers," who won the league title for the second straight season, each time without

SPORT SCRIBES' ALL-STAR TEAMS

Picking all-star teams is inaccurate at best but here are the 1929 first and second honor teams of the Miami Valley Basketball League, selected by six sport scribes:

| First Team   | Pos. | Second Team               |
|--|------|---------------------------|
| Collins, Sidney (12)   | F.   | C. Black, Piqua (5)       |
| Bell, Xenia (8)  | F.   | Everhardt, Greenville (4) |
| Buell, Xenia (12)  | C.   | Sargeant, Piqua (3)       |
| Gibney, Xenia (9)  | G.   | Smittle, Xenia (3)        |
| Hilbert, Piqua (9)   | G.   | Allen, Sidney (3)         |
| Honorable mention: Dimmatos, Xenia forward (3); Neth, Piqua forward (2); Stone, Greenville guard (2); Weaver, Xenia forward (1); Rehmet, Troy guard (1); Kritzler, Sidney center (1); Hieble, Miamisburg center (1); Steffens, Sidney guard (1). |      |                           |

(Numbers after the names of the players show how many votes each received out of a possible twelve.)

the loss of a game, a remarkable record, places four players, and Piqua and Sidney one each on the first mythical all-star

The first and second honor teams were compiled for The Gazette by the sport scribes of the six cities having schools represented in the circuit.

Two league stars were unanimous selections, namely, Buell, Xenia center, and Collins, Sidney forward. Twelve votes were possible for every player and these two stars received twelve apiece, counting two for first team choice and

It will be noticed that Scurry and Bell, Xenia forwards, tied in the voting and consequently each player is placed on the first team, dividing one forward post.

The selection job was a difficult matter because of the number of competent players for almost every position. These teams are perhaps not the teams that everyone is agreed upon but they represent the best talent and a majority of the best players in their positions in the league last season.

It may look as if the scribes favor Xenia at the expense of other league teams but it must be remembered that the winning of the championship without the loss of a game entitled Xenia to especial consideration.

Miamisburg and Troy are the only league schools which are not represented on either honor quintet.

Although almost unanimous choices prevailed for the first team, there was some uncertainty as to the makeup of the second group. The second team, however, is made up of players who might give the first team plenty of competition.

Right away when we begin to analyze the center men we see at a glance that the fight is narrowed down to one man. Even at first blush there could be no other player for the pivot position except Robert Buell, Xenia center. He was a unanimous choice of all the scribes and his selection was quite clear-cut and decisive.

Buell is of good height, weight and physical power, fair speed and scoring ability, lots of drive, was good on defense and usually obtained the tip-off on the center jump. He was easily the outstanding center in the league.

Collins, Sidney star, shares the honor with Buell of being a unanimous choice, as he was last year, which speaks well for his ability. In many ways he was the most brilliant performer in the league. Possessing all the requisites of a finished player, Collins, with a stronger team, would have looked even better. While no figures are available, he was probably the highest scorer in the league last season.

G. O. P. Leaders Stirred

New York Republican leaders were flabbergasted when Chairman Hubert Work of the National Committee of the State received a curt note of resignation from the only woman member, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin. No reasons were given by her but those best informed say that she will probably become identified with a woman's crusade for modification or repeal of the dev law.

BUCCANEERS WILL CROWN QUEEN AT DANCE

The most popular girl at Xenia Central High School has been chosen by the student body but her identity will not be revealed until Friday night on the occasion of the "Buccaneer Hop." A dance to be held in the school gymnasium honoring the Buccaneer basketball team, champions of the Miami Valley League for the second consecutive season.

Students took a vote Thursday afternoon to decide the most popular girl and she will be crowned "Queen of the Buccaneers" at a special ceremony which will take place during intermission of the dance.

A faculty committee composed of Miss Olive Allen, chairman, and Miss Faye Cavanaugh and O. B. Bogart was appointed to count the votes.

This is a new custom. It was inaugurated by the senior class this year and may be followed annually in succeeding years.

The "Queen of the Buccaneers" will be crowned with a wreath of roses by Superintendent Louis Hammerle and will then be escorted to a throne, from where she will watch the grand march, which will last until the dance intermission is ended.

Robert Morton, former Xenia Central High star athlete, freshman student at Ohio Wesleyan University won first place in the tumbling event for Wesleyan's freshman gymnasts in a gym meet with Columbus East High School, state scholastic champions, held last Thursday at Edwards gym at Delaware, O.

Columbus won the meet, 995 to 886 and took first places in every event but tumbling, which Morton won.

Spring football practice is now being held at Wesleyan and Morton, who will be one of the most promising candidates among the new men for the varsity grid squad next year, has abandoned his gym work to report for spring training at the direction of Wesleyan's coach.

Morton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Morton, 701 N. King St.

F. H. Beach, extension horticulturist of Ohio State University, in co-operation with County Agricultural Agent E. A. Drake will hold orchard field demonstrations Monday, March 18, at the Vanderhoof fruit farm, Jamestown at 10 a. m. and at the C. K. Wolfe orchard in the afternoon.

Top-working, pruning trees of Black was a consistently good scorer for Piqua while Everhardt in the Xenia game almost broke up the Buccaneer playhouse with his accurate long shots. Sargeant was a capable center and Allen a fine guard.

One player, Dimmatos, Miamisburg, received three votes, but he was a forward and five other forwards received four or more votes which entitled them to first consideration.

A total of nineteen players received at least one vote. The sport writers who participated in the selections were: Jack Murray of the Piqua Call; Jack Miller of the Troy News; D. J. Deardourf of the Greenville Advocate; Paul O. Satterfield of the Miamisburg News; H. A. Amos, of the Sidney Daily News and Phil W. Frame of the Xenia Gazette.

Charles W. Watson

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to THE GAZETTE

STILLWATER, Okla., March 12.—Charles W. Watson, who operates a number of banks in northwestern Oklahoma, is using a number of unique methods to help farmers. In each case the methods he uses are safe and sound, and are beginning to show results.

Watson was for a number of years manager of the Kansas City clearing house at Kansas City, Mo., but for the last few years he has been a banker, operating, among others, the banks at Carmen and Drummond.

Upsetting the tradition set by other banks all over the country, he spends very little of his time in his banks. He can usually be found on the road or visiting with farmers, urging them to adopt improved farm practices. He strongly believes that if farmers can be encouraged to adopt better agricultural and production and marketing practices that the prosperity of the whole country can be improved.

Follows Own Suggestions Not only does this banker advocate better farm practices, but he follows out his own suggestions. For instance, he has started a "sweet clover farm," located east of Carmen. On this farm Watson set out sweet clover a number of

"I never shall be able to pay the debt of gratitude I owe to this new Konjola," said Mrs. Nancy Patterson, R. F. D. No. 10, Washington C. H., Ohio. "I feel ashamed of myself that I ever doubted that this medicine could help me, but this is my opportunity to tell what this splendid medicine did for me, after I had suffered for years from rheumatism and nervousness. The rheumatic pains settled in my right shoulder, and I could hardly sleep at night, and by day I was scarcely able to move about the house. I was constipated, and nervous, and my health ebbed rapidly. I had tried scores of treatments without success.

"A neighbor, who had had experience with Konjola, urged me to give this new medicine a chance. I was full of doubts, but I started with it. To my astonishment, two bottles were all I needed to put me back on my feet again. In two weeks the constipation was relieved completely, and all the poisons were swept from my body, and every rheumatic pain had disappeared. I am feeling so well that I can hardly think or talk of anything else but Konjola."

"Konjola is different from any other known remedy in this section. It contains 22 juices extracted from natural plants, which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that has been going on for years. At the same time, many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Such a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experience with this new medical product, until now, Konjola is the most highly indorsed medicine that is known in this vicinity.

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher drug store, and by all the best druggists throughout this entire section. —Adv.

The only qualification to the offer was that the farmer must be recommended by a business or professional man in the town in which the farmer did most of his trading. All farmers who wanted more than a bushel of seed were furnished it at cost.

WORKS HARD AND DIES RICH

NEWARK, O., March 14.—How a man accumulated a fortune by hard labor and wise investments, was disclosed here today following the finding of the body of O. M. Crego, 58, in a rooming house.

Up until several years ago, Crego worked in a rubber plant here. He was found dead in bed, presumably the victim of a heart attack.

A search of his effects by health commissioner W. H. Knauss, revealed he was wealthy. Notes, checks, government bonds and certificates of deposits in building and loan associations in Newark, Centerville, Columbus and Granville, totaling more than $36,000 were found.

Crego's home formerly was in Galena, Delaware county. He at one time lived in Columbus.

BROWNELL TRIAL ENTERS SECOND DAY

Jury trial of the suit filed against Carrie J. Brownell, Indian Rifle Road, by The Realty Securities Corp., Miami, Fla., involving $9,000, alleged due on two promissory notes for $5,000 and $4,000, respectively, entered its second day in Common Pleas Court Friday. The suit is also said to involve important Florida property.

The case was begun Thursday morning and is expected to be completed Friday or Saturday.

Personnel of the jury hearing the case: Winnie Sutton, G. J. Smith, Mary Burrell, Edith Blair, Archie Gordon, Clarence Storck, R. E. Bryson, Anna Herr, Mollie F. Landrum, W. A. Anderson, Anna Loveless and C. E. Thuma.

Bilious child suffers agony.

No more headaches and sickness.

Save your child from splitting headache and prostrating sickness. If the tongue is coated and breath unpleasant, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with constipated waste. Simply give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and shortly after all the sour, irritating bile and fermenting undigested food will be moved from the bowels, leaving the system clean and sweet, and the child bright and strong.

"California Fig Syrup" suits child's system better than any harsh purging medicine, and they love its delicious taste.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup. To be sure of getting the genuine, look for the name "California" on the package. —Adv.

The Church Invites You

THE LENTEN CALL

The Lenten season is not more sacred than any other part of the year but it has peculiarly sacred traditions. For over two thousand years Lent has called men from their ordinary to their better selves. It has challenged man's weakness and called him to decisive and higher living. No man can contemplate his own insufficiency for higher service, his own unworthiness of fellowship with God without feeling himself drawn to prayer. Lent is a time for facing life's deeper meanings and purifying our motives.

Churches throughout the Christian world are observing this Lenten season as a time for closer communion with God. Why not accept the invitation and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

KENNEDY'S

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The first three verses of this lesson contain Christ's message at the time of his ascension and is of great significance. The practical interpretation of Christianity is presented in the remaining part of the recorded lesson; the impelling force in Paul's powerful missionary activity was his sense of obligation to Jesus Christ; he felt that he owed everything to the gospel.

Discussion on S.S. Lesson

1. Why would it be unwise for God to give us all knowledge? 2. Where in this lesson is taught the power of example and of unconscious influence? 3. Why does not America with her great riches give more to missions? 4. Why is money so important in religious work? 5. How is the giving of one's self related to missions? 6. What is the Christian standard of giving? 7. How may giving to religious causes be increased? 8. Clerics says, "Stewardship is our trusteeship by which we are put in charge of all our goods to use them in the interest of the great Proprietor, owner of Heaven and Earth. Missions is the process of sending the gospel out over the world."

LESSON PRAYER

"Give us a better understanding of thy kingdom; deepen our love for the King of Kings with a missionary motive that will make us good stewards."

BOOK REVIEW

"Humanism and Christianity" by McConnell. MacMillan Company, consists of a series of lectures on The Church and The World, Instrumentalism, Christian Tolerance, Society and the Higher Individualism. Jesus and Vested Interests, Mysticism and Its Human Consequences, Human Nature and gives himself to God really and truly then all possessions are held in sacred trust, his being only a steward.

V. 7. "But as ye abound in everything, in faith and utterance and knowledge, and in all earnestness, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace." One sin makes a sinner but one grace does not make a saint. No number of virtues are enough so long as one virtue is missing. It is easy to have a few virtues in a high degree of perfection; the difficult thing is to have all virtues in their due proportion and harmony.

V. 8. "I speak not by way of commandment, but as proving through earnestness of others the sincerity of your love." The sincerity and force and worth of character are shown and tested by the conduct that grows out of it.

STAND ON THE JOB

"Now do not let anyone pass your desk unless he is a reporter on this staff" was the strict order given to the newly employed Tim Simmons, a lad of sixteen. One of the first men who demanded passage into the office was the owner of the daily, but Tim persisted in knowing his name that he might report it to the general manager. This request was ignored, the stranger declaring he had a right to pass through and demanded the door be unlocked. Tim stood his ground and it was only by an accident, a reporter passing out, leaving the door open, that made it possible for the owner to get into the office of the general manager.

Tim was fearful that he might lose his job if the stranger was the owner and he was certain he would have lost his job if he had admitted the stranger on his word that he was the owner. After the stranger left, the general manager called Tim into the office and he was almost overcome when it was announced that he was to give up his task. "That stranger was the owner and he is so well pleased with your standing on your job that he has ordered you to be promoted as a reporter and to be promoted as a reporter at once with double your salary."

Church Forum

WHAT MAY LAYMEN DO TO HELP THEIR PASTOR? Laymen may see to it that there is a good attendance at the church service; most ministers desire a large audience more than a large salary—a large audience will likely result in a good salary. Laymen may assume the administrative work of the church, thus relieving the

The Church Invites You

THE LENTEN CALL

The Lenten season is not more sacred than any other part of the year but it has peculiarly sacred traditions. For over two thousand years Lent has called men from their ordinary to their better selves. It has challenged man's weakness and called him to decisive and higher living. No man can contemplate his own insufficiency for higher service, his own unworthiness of fellowship with God without feeling himself drawn to prayer. Lent is a time for facing life's deeper meanings and purifying our motives.

Churches throughout the Christian world are observing this Lenten season as a time for closer communion with God. Why not accept the invitation and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

KENNEDY'S

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The first three verses of this lesson contain Christ's message at the time of his ascension and is of great significance. The practical interpretation of Christianity is presented in the remaining part of the recorded lesson; the impelling force in Paul's powerful missionary activity was his sense of obligation to Jesus Christ; he felt that he owed everything to the gospel. V. 6. "They, therefore when they were come together, asked him, saying Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" To the disciples, though specially trained, thought of the kingdom is something material; the most important knowledge has to do with spiritual values, a conception not easily gained. V. 7. "And he said unto them, it is not for you to know times or seasons which the father hath set in his own authority." There are some things it is best we do not know; as too much fuel smothers fire, so would too much knowledge paralyze us. V. 8. "But ye shall receive power when the holy Spirit is come upon you." The disciples were thinking of glory; Christ promised them power; they were expecting an earthly kingdom; Christ promised them power for a greater task. The power for betterment of the world is not in war equipment but in that force of character projected into man from God. V. 9. "Moreover, brethren, we make known to you the grace of God which hath been given to the churches in Macedonia." Paul proceeds to stir up churches to liberality by the example and influence of the Macedonian church which was very poor and had many reverses. A good steward will always have something for the Lord's work.

Discussion Questions S.S. Lesson

1. Why would it be unwise for God to give us all knowledge?
2. Where in this lesson is taught the power of example and of unconscious influence?
3. Why does not America with her great riches give more to missions?
4. Why is money so important in religious work?
5. How is the giving of one's self related to missions?
6. What is the Christian standard of giving?
7. How may giving to religious causes be increased?

LESSON PRAYER

"Give us a better understanding of thy kingdom; deepen our love for the King of Kings with a missionary motive that will make us good stewards."

Home Education

Now do not let anyone pass your desk unless he is a reporter on this staff" was the strict order given to the newly employed Tim Simmons, a lad of sixteen.

One of the first men who demanded passage into the office was the owner of the daily, but Tim persisted in knowing his name that he might report it to the general manager. This request was ignored, the stranger declaring he had a right to pass through and demanded the door be unlocked.

Tim stood his ground and it was only by an accident a reporter passing out, leaving the door open, that made it possible for the owner to get into the office of the general manager.

Tim was fearful that he might lose his job if he had admitted the stranger on his word that he was the owner.

After the stranger left, the general manager called Tim into the office and he was almost overcome when it was announced that he was to give up his task. "That stranger was the owner and he is so well pleased with your standing on your job that he has ordered you to be promoted as a reporter at once with double your salary."

READ THIS FIRST:

In her short career as a professional dancer, Betty Brown finds the men she attracts are fair weather friends. She is in an automobile accident with Andy Adair, the son of a wealthy family, and dislocates her knee. In the hospital for ten days, George Harris, who disapproves of her dancing career, pays all her bills, while Andy never comes to see her after the accident. Loving Andy, she feels she must marry George for his kindness. Out of the hospital with a stiff knee, George gives her work in the restaurant he owns. She pays him back what he had spent on her and is comparatively happy in her job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

One day at the lunch hour Betty's old school friend Lois came to the restaurant. As she walked past Betty's desk without speaking, Betty thought she had intended to cut her dead. But she was mistaken; in the midst of her luncheon Lois wig-wagged to her cheerily across the dining room, and when she paid her check, greeted her effusively.

"Well, of all things! Who would ever expect to see you here! I knew George Harris owned this place, but I thought you had left town with a road show!"

"No, I'm through dancing for life," answered Betty. "I hurt my knee in an automobile accident."

"Oh, that's too bad! I ran away from home and joined a road show," returned Lois. "I'm home again now, but father won't let me dance any more, even for charity. We are both out of the dancing game."

"I'm sorry, I know you liked dancing."

"I wish you would come and see me," begged Lois. "Mother will be glad to see you when I tell her you aren't dancing any more. She isn't very keen on my dancing friends."

"Then he came to you. Father bought me a nice little car and I'll drive you out."

When Lois came she suggested they go riding instead of to her home. Betty suspected Lois' mother might have been as glad to have her back as Betty thought, but she discovered that Lois wanted to talk about her experiences on the road.

"It was a scream!" she announced, when they had driven out in the country and parked. "Jessie, a girl named Olive, Bess and I arranged a dance act. We pooled our money and bought the act on nice props and put the act on in good shape. We had a lot of nice, fresh costumes."

"Before we were home, Bess wished we had started with a trained seal act so we could have killed and eaten the seals! We did get hungry a time or two, and you would have died to see some hard take one or two of us out and have the lucky ones snitch off the table to bring back to those who didn't get an invitation."

In Chicago we hardly had a cent. Jessie got a small job in a cafe, but they only paid her ten a week. We lived on that while a booking agent told us every day we were going to get us work! Jessie lost the job, and we were down to almost our last dollar when the booking agent told us everything was made. He had a job for us!"

"The job was two split weeks in North Carolina! We didn't have enough money to go to Englewood, right in the suburbs of Chicago. Let alone to North Carolina! Then I got a place posing for shoe and stocking advertisements. We lived it up when I tell them I have been on the stage."

"What's the matter with men that they fall for women who have been in the profession? They just go crazy about you! I guess they think all women on the stage are wicked, and they all like 'em when they are wicked."

"How long since you saw Andy?" Betty could not resist bringing her back to this subject.

"Oh, I don't know how long," Lois answered, vaguely. "I just felt around hither to you and then rush from you back to either again. I don't see the same boys very often. I get tired of the time."

Lois suspected she had seen Betty or nothing of Andy Adair. She knew Lois was a bit inclined to boast of her affairs with men, that she was going to marry Andy, Lois would have been more definite. Betty felt relieved, believing there was no prospect of Andy marrying Lois. Lois was a bit tight for Andy! Even as she thought, she came to the conclusion there was no reason why she should feel anyone was too good for Andy. He had certainly not shown to a good advantage in his affair with her. She could hardly understand why she was still interested in him.

She chatted with Lois about friends who went to school with them, but refused Lois' invitation to attend a recital of a dancing

"How long since you saw Andy?"

brought me home and gave the other three enough money to pay their fares back also; but they skipped out on him and went to New York, where we started from. Gee, but father was mad! He said they were thieves, and maybe he was right from his viewpoint; but take it from me, I got over my tastes for being an artist!"

"Artist, your grandmother! I was hungry for the first time in my life. I kissed men, hoping they would buy me a dinner. Now when I feel the urge to dance I slip up in the attic, where I have an old pier glass, and do it to an audience of one. She's more appreciative than any audience I had while I was on the stage."

"You had a lot of experience, anyway," Betty laughed at the recital of Lois' troubles. He is never down around where the white lights shine and the talcum powder puffs any more."

"Didn't I hear something about his having an automobile accident?" asked Betty, anxiously.

"I don't know," replied Lois. "If he did, it was when I was on the road. I like to say that it sounds very sophisticated to say you have been on the road. The boys just eat it up when I tell them I have been on the stage."

"What's the matter with men that they fall for women who have been in the profession? They just go crazy about you! I guess they think all women on the stage are wicked, and they all like 'em when they are wicked."

"How long since you saw Andy?" Betty could not resist bringing her back to this subject.

"Oh, I don't know how long," Lois answered, vaguely. "I just felt around hither to you and then rush from you back to either again. I don't see the same boys very often. I get tired of the time."

Lois suspected she had seen Betty or nothing of Andy Adair. She knew Lois was a bit inclined to boast of her affairs with men, that she was going to marry Andy, Lois would have been more definite. Betty felt relieved, believing there was no prospect of Andy marrying Lois. Lois was a bit tight for Andy! Even as she thought, she came to the conclusion there was no reason why she should feel anyone was too good for Andy. He had certainly not shown to a good advantage in his affair with her. She could hardly understand why she was still interested in him.

She chatted with Lois about friends who went to school with them, but refused Lois' invitation to attend a recital of a dancing

Passed Up!

READ THIS FIRST:

In her short career as a professional dancer, Betty Brown finds the men she attracts are fair weather friends. She is in an automobile accident with Andy Adair, the son of a wealthy family, and dislocates her knee. In the hospital for ten days, George Harris, who disapproves of her dancing career, pays all her bills, while Andy never comes to see her after the accident. Loving Andy, she feels she must marry George for his kindness. Out of the hospital with a stiff knee, George gives her work in the restaurant he owns. She pays him back what he had spent on her and is comparatively happy in her job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

One day at the lunch hour Betty's old school friend, Lois, came to the restaurant. As she walked past Betty's desk without speaking, Betty thought she had intended to cut her dead. But she was mistaken. In the midst of her luncheon Lois walked to her cheerfully across the dining room, and when she paid her check, greeted her effusively.

"Well, of all things! Who would ever expect to see you here! I knew George Harris owned this place, but I thought you had left town with a road show."

"No, I'm through dancing for life," answered Betty. "I hurt my knee in an automobile accident."

"Oh, that's too bad! I ran away from home and joined a road show," returned Lois. "I'm home again now, but father won't let me dance any more, even for charity. We are both out of the dancing game."

"I'm sorry, I know you liked dancing."

"I wish you would come and see me," begged Lois. "Mother will be glad to see you when I tell her you aren't dancing any more. She isn't very keen on my dancing friends."

"I'll be glad to."

"Then come tonight when you are through. What time do you get off?"

"I'm usually through by eight o'clock."

"Then I'll come for you. Father bought me a nice little car and I'll drive you out."

When Lois came she suggested they go riding instead of to her house. Betty suspected Lois' mother might not have been as glad to hear her as Lois thought, but she discovered that Lois wanted to talk about her experiences on the road.

"It was a scream!" she announced, when they had driven out in the country and parked. "Jessie, a girl named Olive. Bess and I arranged a dance act. We pooled our money and bought a few rather nice props and put the act on in good shape. We had a lot of nice, fresh costumes."

"Before we were home, Bess wished we had started with a trained seal act so we could have killed and eaten the seals! We did get hungry a time or two, and you would have died to see some John take one or two of those things off the table to bring back to those who didn't get an invitation."

"In Chicago we hardly had a cent. Jessie got a small job in a cafe, but they only paid her ten a week. We lived on that while a booking agent told us every day he was going to get us work. Jessie lost the job, and we were down to almost our last dollar when the booking agent told us everything was jake. He had a job for us!"

"The job was two split weeks in North Carolina! We didn't have enough money to go to Englewood, right in the suburbs of Chicago. I went alone to North Carolina. When I got a place possums for shoe and stocking advertisements. We lived on that till we got a job rehearsing for a show which was to play tank towns in the west. One of the other of us was on the stage all the time, and the only thing we didn't do was play bass drum in the street parade."

"We rehearsed for two weeks. Then the angel of the show said it was so rotten he wouldn't put up the money to send it out. We feared all over him, and he was so easy that he gave us fifty dollars each, although show girls are never paid during rehearsals."

"To top it all off, we got arrested. That is, every one of us but Olive, the same man found all the time. We met three boys—a theatrical student, a boy who was medical school, and a boy who was a policeman. They were loose as ashes with their money, and for a week we were with them every night."

"Then, one night while we were out with them, a policeman came up to the car and arrested every one in it. The car had been stolen by the boys in Indianapolis, and one of them had robbed his father's cash drawer before they left for Chicago on their joy party."

"We had an awful time. The boys blamed us for having spent all the money, and said we were 'kale and farewell' girls. The police were about to lock us up as vagrants or something, but a welfare worker believed our story and got in touch with father and he came after me!"

"He was cross as a bear! He brought me home and gave the other three enough money to pay their fares back also; but they skipped out on him and went to New York, where we started from. Gee, but father was mad! He said they were thieves, and maybe he was right from his viewpoint; but take it from me, I got over my taste for being an artist!"

"Artist, your grandmother! I was hungry for the first time in my life. I kissed men, hoping they would buy me a dinner. Now when I feel the urge to dance I slip up in the attic, where I have an old pier glass, and do it to an audience of one. She's more appreciative than any audience I had while I was on the stage."

"You had a lot of experience, anyway," Betty laughed at the recital of Lois' troubles.

"There was a lot of precision in the work we did in one of our numbers, but no precision in the times the ghost walked for us. I guess I'll get married."

"Have you picked the lucky man?" asked Betty.

"All I ask is that he have enough money to support me in a manner to which I would like to be accustomed. I only know three summen. I would rather have Andy Adair than any of them."

"Do you run around with Andy?" asked Betty, thrilled at the mention of his name.

"No, I don't, worse luck!" answered Lois.

"Why not?"

"Oh, Andy's settled up or settled down or something. He is never around where the white lights shine and the talcum powder puffs any more."

"Didn't I hear something about his having an automobile accident?" asked Betty, anxiously.

"I don't know," replied Lois. "If he did, it was when I was on the road. I like to say that it sounds very sophisticated to say you have been on the road. The boys just call it up when I tell them I have been on the stage."

"What's the matter with men that they fail for women who have been in the profession? They just go crazy about you! I guess they think all women on the stage are wicked, and they all like 'em when they are wicked

Mrs. Blanche Whiffin, Virginia's "grand old lady of the stage," celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday Tuesday at her farm home near Montvale, sixteen miles east of Roanoke, Va. From this it appears that Mrs. Whiffin is at present "at liberty" season drives more and more of the old gods and goddesses of Hollywood's Olympus into the void of forgotten ones.

Not many of the old Francis X. Bushman fans recognized him when he appeared in "Ben Hur." Gladys Brockwell did an excellent bit in Janet Gaynor's "Seventh Heaven" but who recognized in her the great Brockwell of another day?

And, as far as that is concerned, Monte Blue is still on the film horizon, but who would recognize him in the accompanying picture? Surely not I.

Keep the door locked—here comes a desperado, if there ever was one. My, what a ruffian! Who'd think this was calm Mr. Monte Blue, dressed up for a movie part?

Mrs. Whiffin did not assume the legitimate actor's animosity toward the motion picture when they became popular. Rather she has appeared in many movies and is popular among the younger players in Hollywood.

Mrs. Whiffin has survived in memory in a day when the rise and fall of stage and movie stars has been too swiftly moving for memory.

Who can remember the stars that used to thrill fans a few years ago? A few short years of inactivity and the once great star fades from public memory save as an empty name.

One recalls Harold Lockwood, Florence La Badie, Maurice Costello by name, but would you remember their faces? Would you recognize photos of Marguerite Clark and Ethel Clayton? Helen Holmes? Louise Glaum? King Baggett? Mary Miles Minter? June Caprice? Mae Marsh? Katherine McDonald? Clara Kimball Young? Those people were the John Gilberts, the Greta Garbets of their day. But the yearly flood of new faces—the Anita Pages, the Rich-

SOUTH SUEDED FOURTH TIME FOR DAMAGES AFTER COLLISION

Ben South, police chief of Wilmington, has been named defendant for the fourth time in a suit for damages growing out of an auto collision on the Dayton-Xenia Pike near the Hawker Reformed Church November 21, 1928.

The latest suit, filed in Common Pleas Court Thursday by Mrs. Minnie J. Neill, colored, E. Market St., demands damages totalling $2,636 for alleged personal injuries sustained in a collision between the auto in which she was a passenger, driven by H. O. Watson, colored, and that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. South.

She charges that Chief South was driving on the wrong side of the road and was entirely to blame for the accident.

Mrs. Neill sets forth that her injuries consisted of cuts and bruises on the body requiring stitches to be taken in the cheek and ear. One ear was severed from her head, she asserts. She was confined to bed for two weeks, was unable to leave the house for more than a month and the injuries to her face and head will leave permanent scars, she adds.

Mrs. Neill asks $2,500 damages for personal injuries, $50 for damage to her wearing apparel, $50 for nurse hire and $36 for medical expenses.

Three other actions for damages aggregating $6,520.25 are already pending against Chief South, filed in connection with the same accident.

Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

PROPERTY OWNERS MAY FILE PROTESTS FOR PAVING COSTS

Fifty property owners in Xenia and Spring Valley Twp., assessed for 5 per cent of the cost of paving that portion of the Columbus-Cincinnati Pike between Xenia and Spring Valley, will have an opportunity to file their written objections, if any, to the assessments with County Commissioners March 30 at 10 a. m.

County Surveyor W. J. Davis has filed the original special assess-

The assessments against fifty benefited land owners along the pike total $2,143.22 in Xenia Twp. and $2,424.69 in Spring Valley Twp.

Property owners are assessed 5 per cent of the total expense less the cost of the bridges.

Assessments have already been made against land owners benefited by the remodeling of the remaining portion of the pike south of Spring Valley.

PASS ORDINANCES FOR SEWER SYSTEMS

Two routine ordinances in connection with the recently completed extension of sewer systems on E. Market and E. Church Sts., were passed on their second reading by City Commission Thursday night.

One measure authorizes a bond issue for $12,300 to finance the improvement in anticipation of the collection of special tax assessments and the second provides that assessments for the cost of the project will be levied against benefited property owners.

The maximum life of the bond issue is ten years and property owners may pay their assessments in ten annual installments if they so desire.

The bonds will first be offered to the interest and sinking fund trustees for purchase and if rejected by them will be offered at public sale.

No other business of importance was transacted at the session. All commissioners were present.

SOUTH SUEDED FOURTH TIME FOR DAMAGES AFTER COLLISION

Ben South, police chief of Wilmington, has been again defendant for the fourth time in a suit for damages growing out of an auto collision on the Dayton-Xenia Pike near the Hawker Reformed Church November 21, 1928.

The latest suit, filed in Common Pleas Court Thursday by Mrs. Minnie J. Neill, colored, E. Market St., demands damages totalling $2,636 for alleged personal injuries sustained in a collision between the auto in which she was a passenger, driven by H. O. Watson, colored, and that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. South.

She charges that Chief South was driving on the wrong side of the road and was entirely to blame for the accident.

Mrs. Neill sets forth that her injuries consisted of cuts and bruises on the body requiring stitches to be taken in the cheek and ear. One ear was severed from her head, she asserts. She was confined to bed for two weeks, was unable to leave the house for more than a month and the injuries to her face and head will leave permanent scars, she adds.

Mrs. Neill asks $2,500 damages for personal injuries, $50 for damage to her wearing apparel $50 for nurse hire and $36 for medical expenses.

Three other actions for damages aggregating $6,520.25 are already pending against Chief South, filed in connection with the same accident.

Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for the plaintiff.

PROPERTY OWNERS MAY FILE PROTESTS FOR PAVING COSTS

County Surveyor W. J. Davis has filed the original special assessment certificate with commissioners in connection with the improvement of Section L of the road and commissioners designated March 30 as the date for filing any written objections.

The assessments against fifty benefited land owners along the pike total $2,143.22 in Xenia Twp. and $2,424.69 in Spring Valley Twp.

Property owners are assessed 5 per cent of the total expense less the cost of the bridges.

Assessments have already been made against land owners benefited by the remodeling of the remaining portion of the pike south of Spring Valley.

PASS ORDINANCES FOR SEWER SYSTEMS

Two routine ordinances in connection with the recently completed extension of sewer systems on E. Market and E. Church Sts., were passed on their second reading by City Commission Thursday night. One measure authorizes a bond issue for $12,300 to finance the improvement in anticipation of the collection of special tax assessments and the second provides that assessments for the cost of the project will be levied against benefited property owners.

The maximum life of the bond issue is ten years and property owners may pay their assessments in ten annual installments if they so desire.

The bonds will first be offered to the interest and sinking fund trustees for purchase and if rejected by them will be offered at public sale.

No other business of importance was transacted at the session. All commissioners were present.
